FOREWORD

It is great honour for me to write a few words about the book “The Balochi Language: A Grammar and Manual” by G.W Gilbertson. This book is about Balochi grammar and its composition which also covered all the aspect of Balochi language. It also shed light often the area in which Baloch are living, including the term Baloch and the people.

It is a great piece of work in which the author attempted to show how, when and where to put your spade into the land of Balochistan.

The reader must read over those paragraphs which have been marked as important which enables readers wherein Balochi is chiefly differs from the other languages.

This book is consisted into three parts; grammar and composition, translation from English to Balochi and from Balochi to English and the passages for the exam.

Further, it is great achievement by Balochi Academy, Quetta to reproduce this piece of work, although page no 98-103 are missing and we tried a lot to find and include those pages but all in vein, hopefully, in the next edition these pages will be included.

THE COUNTRY

If we include the Agencies and Native States, Balochistán covers no less than 131,855 square miles. These figures are arrived at as follows--- sq miles

1. Native States of Kalát and Lás Bela	78,034
2. Agency Territories	44,345
3. British Balochistán	9,476

The area of this vast province thus exceeds that of the whole of the British Isles. Add to this the fact that it is nearly all mountainous. At first sight the difficulty of governing it appears stupendous. But, fortuitously or otherwise, we have hitherto always managed to get right men there. On the north it is bounded by Afghánistán and North-West Frontier Province, on the south by the Arabian Sea, on east by Sindh, the Punjáb, and in part by North-West Frontier Province. On the west lies Persia.

There are a number of salt-water swamps near the coast, but of lakes proper there are none of any importance. The Hámún-i-Máshkel and Hámún-i-Lora are lakes at certain seasons only, after heavy floods, that is to say. In Lás Bela we have the Siranda Lagoon.

The Hingol is the principle river in the country. Most of the others are mere streams, which often during a spate become raging torrents. The regular monsoon, the mainstay of India, is unknown Balochistán. Speaking of the country as a whole, the average yearly rainfall is probably not more than 8 inches.

There are only six towns in this unwieldy territory, and somewhat less than three thousand villages. The reason for this is that the people as a rule are nomads, men and women who appear to have an inherited dislike of stationary town-life, and even of permanent village-life. Their choice of life is still to a large extent that of the care-free wanderer.

Quetta was permanently occupied by us in 1877, in accordance with an agreement made with one Mir Khudádad Khán, the then chief of Kalát. Thus took place about commencement of the successful regime if the famous Sir Robert Sandeman.

THE TERM "BALOCH"

One wonders how many different theories have been put forward from time to time concerning the question of the original home of the Baloch race. A goodly number one may take it. Our hitherto greatest scholar on the subject, the late Mr. M Longworth Dames, has written a brochure on "The Baloch Race", which admittedly disposes of several points in the argument. But has he really convinced any one of us? Did he convince himself? There are many question that arise in the mind of the reader of this valuable monograph. We still seem to be in doubt and in the dark with regard even to be the origin and meaning of the word "Baloch".

The term applies to the people only from it we get the adjective "Balochí", which is also the correct word for the language of the country. The reverse, as pointed out by Dames, is incorrect. Now, whence comes this troublesome dissyllable "Baloch"?

1. Dr Bellew appears to correct it with Bálaicha, a certain Rájput clue.
2. Mr. Crook and some others, on the showing of Dames, look to the Sanskrit word malechha, a barbarian, as a possible clan.
3. Dames himself comes to our aid with what appears to be intended as final: Baloch is a Persian word, which in addition to its use as a proper name, means, as explained in the Burhán-i-Qáti and other dictionaries, a cook's comb or crest.

4. The Baloch himself derives the word from bar, a desert, and luch, naked. He does not, as far as one can ascertain, appear to have any doubts as to the correctness of this derivation. In short, when questioned, he becomes anxious to know what all the brother is about.

And so we might go on quoting without convincing. May we not leave the finding with the Baloch himself? He, at all events, has tradition on his side. But there is this to remember.

The small word luch not only means "bare", "naked", but also "through", "unmitigated". We see this illustration in the compound luch-bahádur, a thorough-paced villain. And in this sense Platts correctly considers luch to be an abbreviated from luchcha, a scamp, a vagabond. So that in Barloch, Baloch, we come to have the "desert scamp" in contradistinction to the "city scamp", "bazaar scamp", of whose shortcomings we hear so much in India. Has the Baloch had his tongue in his cheek all these years? Quoting from Dames "Robbers they were and to some extent still are, to be a successful leader in raids and cattle-theft was a title to esteem, and Ráhzan or highwayman was a title of honour" Why not? Not many years ago there lived a similar gallant race of highlands blessed with a like genius much nearer home. They are to-day the salt of the earth. We have for ourselves no intention of seeking to deprive the Baloch his honours, nor any desire to impress on him that he is not Baluch, a desert scoundrel. To-day he is a gallant fellow and that is all that really matters.

And this leads us to speak of the people themselves. Who are these Baloches? Whence have they migrated? A number of suggestions have been offered and various theories put forward, some plausible and some very much the reverse. Here we have some space to consider a few only.

1. Colonel E Mockler maintains that the present-day Baloches are the remnants of the ancient inhabitants of Mekran, who in turn he believes to have been the Greek Gedrosíí. He derives the word Baloch from Badroch, Badrosh, evil-day. From Badrosh he finds it an easy step to Gadros, Gadrosh, and the rest of it. At least that is how we understand him Col Mockler was a long time in Mekran.
2. Sir Richard Burton, Mr Longworth Dames, and several other well-known writers and travelers give the Baloch an Íránian origin.
3. Pottinger, Khanikof, and some lesser lights are as strongly convinced that the Baloches are Turkomans pure and simple.
4. Sir Thomas Holdich is well supported in claiming an Arab origin for these people.
5. Dr Bellew, however, looks nearer home. He claims India as being the original abode of these wanderers. He declares they are none other than our own very brave Rájputs. His demands on our credulity are rather sweeping. None the less, his remarks and arguments deserve the closest attention of all interested in this very interesting problem.

There is one thing very certain; the Baloches as we find them to-day are a very much mixed people. They are in no sense of the term homogeneous. Further than that, a large number of them are undoubtedly of Indian origin, and this is Dr. Bellew's real claim we take it. In saying this we are not unmindful of their personal appearance, of their habits and customs nor are we at all forgetful of their language. It is the very fact of this mixed nationality that has given use to so many different beliefs. You can easily prove, or go a long way towards proving, a dozen origins for the Baloch, but you will find in long run that your pet theory will depend upon what particular part of Balochistan, you happen to be residing in, and to a still greater extent upon what other Eastern Peoples you have studied and lived among.

In India you can see any night of the week millions of Hindús sleeping with their heads due north. They always sleep in this position for choice, and whenever it happens to be practicable. Should you question one of them as to why they do so you will be told something about the qutb-i-shimáli or North Pole, and more frequently that it is the dastúr or custom. But is that the reason? We all know that the Hindús, the Aryans, came from the north. May not all ages that have effaced something from their memory?

In some parts of Balochistán the people have been noticed putting themselves to considered trouble to ensure sleeping with their heads towards the south or south east. All their houses are built to face south or south-east.

The following extract is from the pen of Arthur Vincent.

We hope to be pardoned for quoting it here ---

“There met us a great and unforgettable band of Baluchis, all the head, men of the famous Marris. They were a splendid sight indeed. Maybe a hundred and fifty of them altogether, they rode towards us in perfect orderliness along the jagged, stone of that narrow defile, then wiry little mounts sweeping along in mass with no sign of jolting or confusion, they moved smoothly as one man. Conspicuous were their huge white turbans furled of yard of 2m thick twists of cloth, then full flowing white robes and voluminous white trousers, their gay gold embroidered sleeveless waistcoats, their richly patterned leather sword belts and curved scabbards, their shining steel sword-hilts, and the sun kissed brass which studded the woodwork of their rifles and muskets, old and new. Most perhaps one was struck with their hand. Every man wore long, thick, heavy ringlets, black, grey, or white according to his age, a great mane of the carefully oiled hair, which hung like ropes, often to below his waist, bobbing and waving as he rode. Thus is your true Baloch unmistakable, in all India none others can show such hand”

That charming writer Edmund Candler tells us that “When one is set in authority over a primitive people it is well to empty one’s mind, as far as possible, of existing standards and codes, dismiss idealism and sentiment, and forget everything that has been said about “Progress”.

The Baloch is a Sunní, in other words he belongs to that large sect of Muslims who acknowledge the first Khalifas as having been the rightful successor of Muhammad. They differ from the Shi’ahsim that the latter maintain that Ali, first cousin of Muhammad, was the first legitimate Khalifa, and that Abu Bakr, Umar, and Usman were not rightful claimants to this title. There are, of course, other minor differences between the beliefs of the two sects. The two denominations have no great love for each other.

THIS BOOK

It was probably the great Sir Richard Burton who first said that one really never knew a language until one became capable of thinking in it. It was, we remember, Robert Louis Stevenson who affirmed that words resembled the small wooden nursery blocks with which we lovingly played in our early years. At all events, both these wise saws are on record. Let us try to add a third, the digger is not taught how to dig by being given so many dry lectures on the use and abuse of certain oblong manual implements. He is in the early stages just shown which end of his spade should be put into the soil. For the rest he is left to himself. To himself and to the use of that priceless commodity called common sense. Man being entirely an imitative animal, he seldom, if ever, fails to become a good digger, provided always he keeps up the effort long enough and continues to observe. It is only the man who holds out that can hope to win through in any line of study, and inferentially in any line of life.

In this small work we have attempted to show how, when, and where to put your spade into the ground, and also how to arrange your nursery blocks so as to get at the required edifice. This latter is the sole object of the many literal renderings we have given you. You must assuredly begin to think in the language if you are to get on quickly. You cannot now learn a language as you learnt your mother tongue at your mother's knee. To say that you can, or should, is sheer lunacy. As it is some of us are children twice in our short lives. Do not seek to bridge the short sane interval by remaining a nuisance all the time. You have now reason on your side, and can outstrip your early efforts a thousand times and more. What you understand you cannot forget, it actually becomes part of you. This is no mere fancy, but a fact that can very easily be proved and explained.

The best way to use this book is to read over those paragraphs that have been marked as important. This will probably take you half an hour. This hasty perusal will help to show you wherein Balochí chiefly differs from the language you know best. There will be such a language. A vast amount of help can be got from comparisons. This done, start over again, and study closely and thoroughly. Do not miss anything this time? You will find that obscurities have a knack of disappearing as you proceed. At the end of each chapter you will find a set of questions. If you have studied as you should, and read as you must read, you will be able to answer them all off-hand. They amount to a good deal.

When you have made up your mind to study Balochí get so many days' leave if you can. If you cannot, well, no matter, one's sleeping hours are still to a large extent at one's own disposal. Two hours nightly stolen out of these have never yet been known to harm anyone. Your next step is to secure a servant, one who can speak Balochí only. The farther afield you go for him the better. The only point you need worry about is that his enunciation be clear and distinct. Make him your man, Friday for as many months as you may require his services. We shall be much mistaken if you do not eventually become sorry to part with him. Have him with you on every possible and impossible occasion, going to your work, at your work, and coming from your work. Make no mistake about it, you will find in him an intelligent amusing human in nine cases out of ten. You will come to think of him and of his people as you have never thought before, you will begin to perceive in the East that indefinite attractive something, and more wondrous than all, you will come to know that you also possess the rare gift of being able to command and control thousands of Natives where hitherto you have found it a difficult matter to command and control your own small household. In saying, this, we have no thought of sentiment.

Do not try to learn long lists of dry words by memorizing, but just a few at a time by using them. Your man Friday is with you. He is in your room. Point out to him your all too scanty pieces of furniture. Listen to what he calls them, imitate him, keep on imitating him until he stops smiling. From these to the house, from the house to the compound, from the compound to your animals, and so on. Friday is accompanying you on your way to office. You will see a number of ordinary things on the way there. Friday names them, you name them after Friday. You must not mind of Friday laughs, he generally will. That is why he is likable. In a day or two adjectives will begin to attach themselves to these names, to these nouns, and still later verbs, adverbs, etc. you are now practically out of the wood, and able to see daylight of the other side. Words so assimilated you can hardly ever forget. They somehow become part of you. And that is just why we have used the term "assimilated". Language is a living thing.

Meantime keep on revising your manual. However poor it may appear to you-and it is poor-you cannot revise it too often. Alternative we have endeavored to put before you all the best known canons of the language-and that in almost every sentence-you should at the same time keep a notebook. You will find it invaluable. For one thing you cannot have too many examples. Strange as it may seem one can often conjure up an example without being able for the moment to conjure up the rule for its formation. It is what we understand that sticks. It is simply a case of the digger and the spade.

Just one word more, Drop your Oxford intonation when you seek to speak Balochí. We mean drop it for the time being, not for good. It is priceless, and as we are all well aware has won empires for us? But it cannot be used when speaking Balochí. Listen to your henchman Friday, and note how he fills his mouth with every word. It is exactly the same in the case of the Pathan.

Take comfort that once famous master Eton, Mr. Oscar Browning who passed away a few weeks ago, added to his various other achievements that of learning of the Portuguese language at the age of 79 and polish at the age of 80. Outside our lunatic asylums there are few, indeed, who are not capable of learning half a dozen languages in addition to their own if given good textbook and shown how.

Great games have been played on this frontier. A much greater game than any of them will be played here shortly. So much is inevitable, unless human nature is to belief itself. Some 900,000 Baloches are behind us at this moment. Make it pleasant duty to keep them there.

These remarks would be incomplete without recording our deep sense of obligation to Miss E. E Bate, of 145 Portsdown Road Maida Vale, London, daughter of the late Rev John Drew Bate, the distinguished Hindu Scholar, for the very great assistance rendered to us in putting the work into shape for the printers, and to the printers themselves for the praiseworthy way in which they have seen it through the press.

THE ALPHABET

1. Balochí has no alphabet of its own, and little of what can be called literature behind it. The people are illiterate almost to a man. True, the country has begun to wake up lately, and some epistolary correspondence is to be met with. This is carried out on in the Persian character, and to a great extent each correspondent makes a different use of the letters of the alphabet of that language. Balochí in a measure is but a colloquial form of Persian, and this much the Baloches themselves acknowledge. On other hand, a great deal of Balochí, and the best and most interesting portion of it at that, has no claim of the Persian nor on Persian construction, as will be seen later in this work.

2. There are sounds in Balochí that cannot be expressed by the letters of the Persian alphabet. That is the case against their use when writing Balochí. In support of their use is the fact, already stated, that the very few Baloches who attempt to write do so invariably in the Persian characters. That is natural, and what we should expect. Probably no Baloch has ever been known, of himself, to use the Roman characters. It is unlikely that any of them ever will use the Roman, except those in Government service.

3. As it is highly improbable, however, that an officer proceeding to Balochistán will make Balochí his first language, the Roman characters have been used throughout this manual. This step, it is hoped, will help towards a more accurate pronunciation, and a saving of many hours of labour that can and should be more usefully spent in talking to the natives of the country.

Obs I Not too much time should be spent of the alphabet given below, peculiarities of the sound will be found fully explained throughout the work, as they arise

Obs 2 Most officers on their first arrival in India are expected to work up to a higher standard pass in Urdú that is entirely as it should be. But to ensure success later, the first language should be Persian. When a tree has to be felled the wise-cutter goes direct to the root.

Obs 3 Dames in his Text-book of the Balochí Language gives the Persian and Roman alphabets in the opening chapter, and uses the same characters in the vocabulary. The body of the work is in the Roman, A wise and commendable device. The date of the work is 1891. It is one of the textbooks.

Obs 4 Mockler in his Grammar of the Balochí Language puts his text in both the Persian characters and italicized Roman. An excellent idea was more care bestowed on pronunciation. In many instances in this work the correct pronunciation of the Balochí has been entirely sacrificed. Why this is so can readily understood from what has already been said. This work was published in 1877.

Obs 5 in CE Gladstone's Baluchi Hand-book no mention is made of alphabets. The body of the work, however, is in Persian character, and is accompanied by a translation. A few words only are Romanized. The date of the publication is 1874.

Obs 6 Hetú Rám's Bilochi-Náma's appears to have been first compiled in 1875, and was republished in lithograph by Munshí Guláb Sing and Sons, of Lahore, in 1896. It is still available.

Obs 7 Hetú Rám's work has since been translated into English by J M Douie . the textbook at the same time has been Romanized. It is the second of the two textbooks set for examination in Balochí by the Higher standard, and is dated at Lahore 1898. On account of the conversational sentences it contains and its easy, unpretentious style, it has hitherto been the best work available.

Obs 8 There is an English translation of Dames' textbook which can be got free the Punjab Government Press, Lahore. The translation is by R S Diwán Jamiat Rai, and is dated 1904. It is useful if weak.

Obs 9 W Geiger in Die Sprache der Balútschen gives some useful information regarding the Baloches and their language. The brochure is not in English, however, and as far as known can only be consulted in Grundriss der Iranischen Philologie.

- A, a* has the sound of “u” in the English word “bun”, or of “o” in the word “ton” e.g., abtar, a hyena, ajab, strange, harb, the jaw-bone, mar, a man.
- Á, á* . . . is the same letter lengthened in sound, and represents “a” in the English word “path”. e g, áf, water; áráin, rest, párá, a hog-deer; sáth, caravan.
- AU, au* is a diphthong sounded as “ou” in the English word “house” e g, auzár, a tool, auhsán-khatá, a puzzle, hau, yes, mauth, death.
- AI, ai* . . . is the second diphthong in the language. It is sounded as “ai” in the word “aisle” e.g., aiv, a fault, blemish, hai, or, naidh, fine, well ground; khair, an ox.
- B, b* . . . is pronounced as in English, in Urdú and in Persian e.g., bol, a promise, or, bohra, a vault, talab, pay, sábún, soap.
- Bh, bh* . . . is the same letter aspirated e.g., bhán, manure, bholú, a monkey, labh, obtaining, getting.
- CH, ch* . . . has the sound of “ch” in our words “church”, “lurch” e.g., chirra, shot, charo, merely, only, kacherí, a darbár, luch, a profligate.
- CHH, chh* . . . is the proceeding letter aspirated eg., chham, the eye; chhoró, a boy.
- D, d* . . . is pronounced as in Persian and softer than in English e g, dast, hand, dem, the face, godí, mistress, mál-dár, a cattle-owner.

- DH, dh* . is the same letter with its aspirate e g, dhír, dust, dhak, hurt, injury.
- D, d* . . is the cerebral d of Urdú and Hindí. To a certain extent its sound resembles that of the English letter in “dame”, and is got by pressing the tip of the tongue to the back part of the roof of the mouth, e g, dang, a sting, dán, a desert, low barren hills, sudkagh, to sob, gadí, the middle finger.
- DH, dh* . is the aspirated form of the proceeding letter e g., dhakan, cover, dhaggav, a bull.
- DH, dh* . is pronounced very softly, and very nearly as “th” in the words “mother”, “brother”, breathe” e g, edha, here, sarphadh, understanding, sarodh, music, gardhagh, to boil. It does not begin a word.
- E, e* . . is the yá e majhúl of the Urdú. Its true sound is that of “ay” in “say”, “day”, or that of “y” in “easy”, which is the same. The letter n when immediately following it is generally nasal e g., tharagh-en, thou returnest; esh, this sherí, lower, gwaragh-e, he eats.
- F, f* . differ from the same letter in English in that it is wholly labial. The corresponding English letter, it need hardly be pointed out, is partly dental Examples are áf, water, fál, an omen, shéf, a slop, shaf, night.
- G, g* . is hard letter, as in Persian and Urdú e g, gál, speech, gal-gal, a noise, khargaz, a venture; khalgar, stony ground. It never has the soft sound of the English letter in “gin”.
- GH, gh* . is the last letter aspirated e g, ghal, a raiding party; ghoro, a band of horsemen.

GH, gh . is the Arabic guttural met within Perisan, Urdú, and Pakkhto. It is pronounced as in Persian and Urdú, and not so harshly as in Arabic and Pakkhto e g., gharíb, poor; gham, grief, shágh, a swing, zágh, to give birth. All Balochí infinitives end in this letter.

H, h . is pronounced as in English e g., hál, news; hastal, a mule, sihárí, awl; síyáh, black.

I, i . is pronounced as the same letter in English in such words as “pin”, “sin”, “tin”. eg., istaragh, a razor; isrár, a secret, bir, a turban; sihr, magic.

Í, í . is the yá e ma' rúf of Urdú. It is represented in English by “ee” in such words “see”, “flee”, “glee”. Also by “í” in the word “machine”. e g., dír, far, ní, now, ímán, faith, honour, ía, this.

J, j . has the sound of the same letter in English, or very nearly so. e g., juhal, deep; jar, clothes, bíj, seed, kajagh, to cover.

JH, jh . is the proceeding letter aspirated; e.g., jherá, a qurrel, jhúr, clouds.

K, k . has the sound of the English “k”, but not that of the Persian letter, which in a certain degree is palatal eg., kuntagh, a thorn, kárch, a knife, lashkár, an army, larkagh, to hang.

KH, kh . is the letter “k” aspirated e g., Khenú, a ball; kha-í, whose, gwarakh, a lamb, lekho, an account.

KH, kh . is an aspirated guttural, pronounced as in Persian and Urdú. Like the letter gh, it is less harshly pronounced than in Pakkhto e g., khán, a chief, khojá, a eunuch, wakht-a, at the time, nákhun, a nail, claw.

- L, l* . does not differ in sound from the same letter in English e.g., lang, lame, lawar, a stick, nal, a snuffbox; val, a creeper.
- M, m* . is pronounced as the same letter in English. e.g., mazho, a desert; masít, a mosque, ham-esh, this very one; yamárá, for ever.
- N, n* . should be pronounced as the same letter in English e.g., nílagh, blue, nermosh, noon, mazan, large; yakín, certain.
- N, n* . is the nasal n or nún e ghunna of the Persian and Urdú. It is generally preceded by one of the long vowels á, í, ú eg., thar-ún, let us return, thán, which, án, he; haw-en, this very one. It cannot, of course, begin a word.
- O, o* . is sounded as the same letter in the English words “note”, “rote”, “mote”, eg., odh, there; ola, formerly, ondo, overturned, pogokh, the gullet.
- P, p* . does not greatly differ in sound from the same letter in English e.g., pálo, frost, parlá, an echo; cháp-janagh, to clap the hands, káp-kát, blind and deaf.
- PH, ph* . is the letter p aspirated, and should be pronounced as such; e g., phádh, the foot, phár, leisure; phuphí, paternal aunt, chauper, round.
- R, r* . . is pronounced as in Persian, and nearly as in English: eg., rekh, sand; rísh, the beard, sor, brackish; kár, work.
- R, r* . . is the cerebral “r” of the Hindí and Urdú. It is pronounced by raising the tip of the tongue towards the roof of the mouth. In this it resembles the letter d, with which it is closely connected in sound eg., dír, the body, form, ther, a hill; re-rdeagh, to drive out, chárí; an ascent. It does not begin a word.

S, s . . . should be sounded as in English eg., sárth, cold, sáh, shade, gisar, a mistake, misk, musk.

SH, sh . . . is a palatal sibilant pronounced as in English e.g., shír, milk; sherí, lower, rosh, day; kashkol, a beggar's bowl.

T, t . . . is the Persian "t", which is pronounced softer than the English letter. In other words it is purely dental eg., telán, a shove, a push; tof, a cannon, jannat, paradise; shist, aim, the sight of a gun.

Th, th . . . is the same letter aspirated. e.g., thákh, leaf, thál, twigs, lath, a stick, kath, spinning.

T, t . . . should be pronounced as in Urdú, by raising the tip of the tongue to the roof of the mouth e g., tapur, felt, tong, a hole, kutragh, to gnaw, lotagh, to desir.

TH, th . . . is the preceding letter aspirated eg., tháhagh, to stand, tháthí, a wooden drinking cup, lath, an embankment, guth, the throat.

TH, th . . . is pronounced as in Arabic, from which this sound is got, or as in the English words "health", "wealth", "breath". eg., phith, father, máth, mother, wath, self, háthín, a lady, a woman. It does not begin a word.

U, u . . . should be sounded as "oo" in English words "pool", "fool", but lighter. e.g., umar, age, urd, an army, unhálá, the hot weather; ureyáy, of one's own accord.

Ú, ú . . . is the same letter lengthened and pronounced as in the English words "sue"

, “blue”, “rue”. e g., búz, wild, savage; tútí, a trumpet, dúhon, smoke; gúngrú, a turnip. This sound is probably never initial.

V, v . is a purely labial letter, and does not, therefore, represented the same letter in English eg., vadagh, to grow, vadrí, bribery, lev, sport, mahval, a mattress, rug. It sometimes takes the place of b, and often that of w.

W, w . should be pronounced as the same letter in English. e.g., wámdár, a debtor, watta, a stone, gwar, near, with, gwáth, the wind.

WH, wh . is the preceding letter aspirated eg., wháv, sleep, whár, destroyed, whard, food, whán, to tray.

Y, y . is sounded as “y” in English eg., yát, memory, yak, one, hayá, shame, gíyáf, waste, barren.

Z, z . is pronounced like the English letter eg., zang, a turnip, zamb, a morsel, a mouthful, lirz, spittle; navz, the pulse.

ZH, zh . has the sound of the letter “z” in the English word “azure” or that of the letter “s” in the words “measure”, “pleasure”, “treasure” eg., wázhá, master, zhand, separate, apart, zhumára, for ever, azh, from. It should not be considered as aspirated form of z.

4. The speech of the men of the north is more aspirated, and, if anything, more guttural, than that of the men of the south, the sound gh is much affected in the north. In the south the nasal sound of n, the nún e ghunna, is more in evidence.

5. Words borrowed from the Hindí or Urdú either direct or through the Punjábí and Sindhí generally change the cerebrals, tá e murakkala, etc into the corresponding soft letters, thus t, d, and r become t, d, and r in Balochí. But this is not a hard and fast rule by any means.

6. Quite on the contrary, words introduced from the English, a class, by the by, becoming more numerous daily, harden these same three letters, t, d, and r in Balochí. eg., “magistrate” in the mouth of a Baloch becomes májitret. On the whole, the differences in the speech of the men of the north and south are not very marked, and are becoming less so every day. The following are a few examples ---

North	South	English
Doshígha	doshí	Last night
Gálwar	hálwar	News
Hawáre	habáre	eight annas
Khíndarígha	khíndar	naked
Míhrwánaghí	míhrwání	kindness
Magdár	wkdár	power, ability
Mizil	manzil	stage, journey.
Níamagha	níánwán	between
Phashagh	pachagh	to cook
Ro, rosh	roch	day
Sakhígha	sakhía	very, exceedingly
Sawárigħ	sawárik	breakfast.

Obs 1 The English letter “o” becomes a in Balochí eg., jánsan, Johnson, Rabinsan, Robinson, smálpáx, small-pox.

Obs 2 The preposition ma, m, takes a nasal n when it precedes a word beginning with a vowel, long or short eg., man in rosh-an, in these days.

Obs 3 Similarly, a nasal n, or nun e ghunna, changes into n before a vowel eg., án di gon ákh<sup>u</sup>ta, he also came with (them). For án di gon ákh<sup>u</sup>ta, ma de-án-í, I shall give it, for ma de-án-í

Obs 4 The letter n is not always nasal when preceded by one of the long vowels. Just when and where it is to be nasally pronounced is one of the difficulties of the language. Usage in many instances appears to be the sole guide.

Obs 5 The soft sound th is most frequently met in the past, participles of transitive and intransitive verbs: e.g., shuth<sup>a</sup>, went, bith<sup>a</sup>, became, Murth<sup>a</sup>, died, eith<sup>a</sup>, swelled.

Maroshí azh Derav-a ákhtagh-án, I have come from Dera Ghází Khán to-day (to-day from Dera I have come).

Bángahá Láhor-a rav-án, I shall go to Lahore to-morrow (to-morrow-morning Lahore-to I shall go).

QUESTIONNAIRE.

1. Balochí has no alphabet of its own. What characters are generally used when writing it? What are their respective merits?
2. What is the pronunciation of the letters d, dh, kh, r, th?
3. Name the letters that are generally aspirated. Is zh an aspirated letter?
4. Name some of the differences between the speech of the north and south?
5. Where would you expect to hear the words mikdár, sawárik, doshígha, khíndar, and mizil?
6. When is the letter n generally nasal? When is this rule violated?
7. Put the proper nouns Thomson, Johnson, Pogson into Balochí. Is there any ruling to guide you?
8. Do the particles ma, in, and gon, with, ever change?
9. Give the Balochí for windy, dark, a porch, fire, full.
10. Translate into English – juhal, bohra, kir, burz, logh-wázhá?

CHAPTER II

THE ARTICLES

7. There are in Balochí no articles that correspond to the English “a”, “an” and “the”. In speaking and writing it is the context of the sentence that really determines and tells us whether a particular noun is definite or indefinite.

8. The force of the English indefinite article is to some extent obtained by placing the numeral yak or yá, one, before the noun, or by adding to the noun the suffix e, that is the yá e majhúl. This letter e, for the sake of convenience, has been called “the e of unity”. When still greater stress is required the two methods may be combined eg., faqír, beggar, yá faqír, a beggar, one beggar, yá faqír-e, a beggar, a certain beggar, yá faqír-e-á artho ma-í pith-ár dátha, a certain beggar brought (it) and gave (it) to my father. Here the e may be said to represent the article, while the final long á is the sign of the agentive case, the literal reading being “by a certain faqír, etc. it is worth nothing and remembering that the suffix e has become an infix.

9. In a somewhat similar manner the place of the definite article, is taken by the demonstrative pronouns e, this, and án, that, in their emphatic forms haw-e and haw-án eg., zál, a woman, haw-e zál, this woman, particular woman (referred to), haw-án zál, that woman, the woman (standing over there), án-híá haw-e zál jatha, he struck this woman, he struck the woman (we have been mentioning), án-híá haw-án zál jatha, he struck that woman, he struck the woman (you see there).

10. The “e of unity” takes precedence of all the other suffixes, it cannot be separated from its noun, when other suffixes are used the “e of unity” becomes an infix eg., mard, a man, mard-e-a, of a certain man, mard-e-ar, to a certain man, (go) mard-e-a, with a certain man, mard-e-á, by a certain man; (azh) mard-e-a, from a certain man. It cannot be used with case suffixes beginning with e or í, eg., e, egh, egha, ígh, ena, í, all meaning “of” 17.

11. This “e of unity” may sometimes have the force of the some of our indefinite pronouns eg., áf-e be-y-ár, bring some water; yak-e-á gwashta, someone said, dár-e n-en, there is no wood, edha chi shikár-e asten, is there any shooting here? Án chi kár-e khanagh-e, what particular word does he do?

Obs 1 Proper nouns, the specific, terms, sun, moon, etc., are of themselves definite, so that what has been said refers to general nouns only.

Obs 2 Balochí is not unique in that it has no definite article; we find none in Sanskrit or any of the modern Aryan languages.

Obs 3 This e of unity in the Persian generally has the sound of long í, that is ya e ma'rúf eg., kas í-rá bi-talab, call someone

Obs 4 In a negative statement it will generally be found to have the sense of “not a”.

Obs 5 Its derivation is from yak, one with the letter h discarded.

GENDER

12. In Balochí no distinction is made on account of gender males are masculine, females, feminine, and lifeless objects of no gender. When it becomes necessary to distinguish between the genders, and separate words do not exist, nar, male, and mádhagh, female, are placed before the noun eg., gurkh, a wolf, nar gurkh, male wolf, mádhagh gurkh, a female wolf. The adjectives nar and mádhagh, may, and generally do, end in e eg., rophask, fox, nar-e rophask, male fox, mádhagh-e rophask, a female fox 41.

13. In some cases the male and the female are denoted by different words. The following list includes those most generally heard ----

Masculine

Adda, brother (familiar term)

Bachh, a son

Bráth, a brother

Bíng, a dog

Chhorav, a boy

Dhaggav, a bull

Dhapar, a male weaned calf

Ghator, a male weaned lamb

Gurándh, a male uriyal

Khuragh, a colt

Lerav, a male camel

Lágh, a male ass

Mar, mard, a man

Nána, a maternal grandfather

Naukh, a bride

Nariyán, a horse

Pháshan, a male markhor markhor

Phír, an old man woman

Phith, pith, father

Phíruk, grandfather

Feminine

Addí, a sister

Jinkh, janikh, a daughter

Gohár, a sister

Hind, a bitch

Chorví, a girl

Gokh, a cow

Pharáf, a female weaned calf

Phulát, a female weaned lamb

Gad, a female uruyal

Bihán, a filly

Dáchí, a female camel

Khar, a female ass

Zál, jan, a woman

Nání, a maternal, grandmother.

Sálok, a bridegroom

Mádhin, a mare

Khoí, a female

Phírund, an old

Máth, mother

Dadí, grandmother

Pohar, a male weaned kid

Sarwán, a buck

Thíle, a male slave

Wasrik, a father-in-law

Gísh, a female weaned kid

Thíthal, a hind

Molid, a female slave

Wase, wasí, a mother-in-law

Obs 1 The terms nar and mádhagh are applicable to animals only when speaking of your lady cousin you cannot say mádhagh-e nákhozakht.

Obs 2 The adjectives nar-e and mádhagh-e of the Balochí are the naru and mádi of the Sindhi, and the nar and máda of the Persian.

Obs 3 It should be noted that separate words to represent the feminine exist only in the case of human beings, relations, and the more common of domestic animals. In this, Balochí follows the analogy of the Sindhi.

Obs 4 In Sindhi we find a few nouns denoting human beings, castes, occupations, etc., that from their feminines by means of the affixes ni, m, am, and áim. The affix áni is found even in the case of a few adjectives in that language.

14. A few masculine nouns form their feminines regularly by the addition of ni, as in Urdú and Hindí. Borchí, a cook, makes, borchen, and baira, a waiter, bairen. Most if not all such nouns have been introduced into the language.

Masculine

Domb, a minstrel

Jat, a camel herd

Jarshodh, a washerman

Feminine

Dombní, a female minstrel

Jatní, a female camel herd

Jarshodhní, a washerwoman

Gawál, a cowherd
Pahnuál, a shepherd
Ráhak, a farmer
Síyahphost, a sweeper
 sweeper
Sawálí, a petitioner
Tumandár, a tumandár

Gawální, a female cowherd.
Pahnwální, a sheperdess.
Ráhakní, a farmer's wife
Síyahphostní, a female sweeper
Sawální, a female petitioner
Tumandární, the wife of a tumandár.

WORDS TO BE REMEMBERED

Household Utensils, etc.

Whán, a tray
Kodí, a metal cup
Kárch, karcha, a knife matting
Khat, khatra, a bedstead
Mashk, a water-bag
Khárí, a basket
Kulaf, a lock
Lihef, a blanket
Shál, shár, a blanket
Hínz, a leathern churn
Sáf, clean
Pholo, hollow
Galathá, rotten
Kisáin, kisán, small
Sarrof, solid
Thanakh, fine, thin

Diwo, a lamp
Wat, a wick
Sund, a basket made of matting
Sarakh, sanak, a kneadingtrough
Kadah, a cup
Manjav, a bed
Kunjí, a key
Thaghárd, matting
Nishtejaní, bedding
Falásí, a carpet
Kunt, blunt
Sak, strong, stiff
Bazz, coarse
Mazáin, mazann, big
Zaghar, fresh
Tez, sharp

Tezhagh, tekhta, to sharpen.
Shodhagh, shusta, to wash.
Phrushagh, phrushta, to be broken.
Pálenagh, pálentha, to strain liquids.

Chánagh, chánitha, to sift flour.

Mallagh, mallitha, to knead.

Kindagh, kindetha, to spread out

Do-tál-khanagh, do tál-khutha, to fold

Cháragh, cháaritha, to hoist

Dak-janagh, Dak-jathn, to solder

Chilkagh, chilketha, to shine, glitter

Malenagh, malentha, to polish.

Ma áf-a waragh-án, I am drinking water (I water am drinking).

Án dí sakhía thúní en, he also is very thirsty (he also very thirsty is).

Thau shudhí en, are you hungry (thou hungry art)?

Hau, thúní dí án, shudhí dí án, yes I am hungry and thirsty also (yes, thirsty also I am, hungry also I am).

Juz-ún, whard war-ún, let us go and eat (let us go, food let us eat).

Whard taiyár en, is the food ready (the-food ready is)?

Naghan en, shír en, nemagh en, goshd en, ham-chí en, there is bread, milk, butter, meat, there is everything (bread is, milk is, butter is, meat is, everything is)

Chí-e naghan, chí-e goshd war-án, I shall eat some bread and meat (some bread some meat I shall eat).

Tha-í láf ser bítha, are you satisfied (thee-of the-belly full has become)?

Ní thángo rav-ún, where shall we go now (now where shall we go)?

Dirá rav-ún ján shodhagh-a pha, let us go to the river to bathe (the river-to let us go, bathe to). The particle pha, to, for, for the purpose of, usually precedes the infinitive pha ján-shodhagh-a, to wash our bodies, to bathe.

Daryá than phalawa en, in which direction is the river (the river which direction is)?

Ma Phol-phurs khan-án, I shall make enquiry (I enquiry shall make)

Án ráhak gushagh-e ma dirá áf kham en, that cultivator states that there is little water in the river (that cultivator is saying in the-river water little is).

Ráhak ganokh bí; ma dirá áf báz en, the cultivator must be a fool, there is plenty of water in the river (the-cultivator a-fool will be, in the river plenty is)

Ma sahí ne-y-án, hacho gushagh-e, I do not know, he says so (I informed not-am, thus he is saying).

Gind-ún, let us see

Dag-a juzún, let us go by the road (by the road let us go).

Dag asten, is there a road (a road there is)?

QUESTIONNAIRE

1. How do you determine in a Balochí sentence whether a noun is used definitely or indefinitely?
2. How is the indefinite article represented? And the definite?
3. What is meant by “the e of unity”? How is it pronounced?
4. What is the place of this e when used with a noun?
5. How and when does it become an infix? Give an example.
6. What is the literal English of zál, zál-e, zál-e-a, zál-e-á, go zál-a, go zál-e-á?
7. Put into Balochí, a dog, a certain dog, to a certain dog, by a certain dog?
8. Translate into Balochí, bring some water, milk, bread and meat.
9. What are the rules regarding gender?
10. Give the feminines of bachh, bíng, guránd

CHAPTER III

THE NOUN

15. In the formation of the cases there is much that is still doubtful and unsettled. In so vast a country as Balochistán, so sparsely populated, and among tribes uneducated, this is not strange. Differences and discrepancies are, however, rapidly disappearing, so much so that formations heard in the north only, a few years ago, are to-day understood and in general use in the south also. Intercourse between the tribes is increasing, and will continue to increase in future. As a result there is a perceptible of slow leveling up of forms which will ultimately lead to a uniform and common speech.

16. There is only one declension in Balochí, and all nouns may be said to be declined alike. The few exceptions are for the most part euphonic. There are eight cases, the nominative, genitive, dative, accusative, locative, agentive, ablative and vocative. The agentive case is here placed next to the ablative, that being its logical position on declension in those languages that have this case. It is distinct from the nominative, but does, in a way, connote the ablative. The ablative generally denotes the instrument with which, and the agentive always the agent by whom an act has taken place.

17. The formation of the various cases will be more easily followed and understood from an example than from any lengthy discussion, however lucid the latter may be. The case endings, the suffixes, have been placed in order of their prevalence, or what has been considered such. For, after all, this will be a matter of opinion, and also a matter of locality.

Mard, man, a man.

Base, mard.

Voc	-án							O man!

18. The nominative singular, as will have been seen, is the simple form of the noun, it has no case endings, no suffixes. The nominative plural is formed by adding the syllable án to the singular, just as is done in Persian. This is the rule, but it is one very often neglected, the singular form being frequently used when more than one is meant to be understood. The Baloch will tell you that when a noun is preceded by one of the numerals, or by chikhtar, how many, chikar, how much, how many, or by any word denoting number, the plural ending án is not required, that the plural is already indicated eg., chikhtar zál ant, how many women are there? Instead of chikhtar zál-án ant. In this Balochí closely follows the analogy of Urdú, Hindí, and other Indian languages. The Baloch seems to think that one word in a sentence should suffice to indicate number, be it noun, adjective, or verb.

Obs The plural termination án has been satisfactory proved to be the remote demonstrative, pronoun án, that.

19. The genitive singular is very often left uninflected, in other words used without any suffix, as shown in the examples given below. Its case endings are, however, when used a, e, egh, egha, ígh, and í. The case ending of the genitive plural is nearly always ání, that is the plural suffix án with í added. The nasal sound of n naturally ceases when the vowel í is added. 6, Obs 3 The sign of the genitive plural is seldom omitted.

Obs 1 In Sindhí, also, the case-sign of the genitive is frequently dropped, both in prose and poetry.

Obs 2 In the case of nouns in apposition, proper nouns especially, the genitival affix is not required.

20. In the case of the dative singular the suffix in most general use is, perhaps, ra. Other suffixes are ár, ar, ára. The dative case should always have one of these suffixes. The signs of the dative plural are ánra, ánar, and ar. They are frequently attached to the singular form of the noun when the plural is intended. In other words, the suffix án is omitted.

Obs 1 The particles rá is one of the signs of the dative case in Persian and the only sign of the accusative case.

Obs 2 A further key to origin of the Balochí signs of the dative and accusative cases is found in the present-day tendency in Persian to use short a, short í, and even short u, to denote these cases mard-a, mard-í, mard-u, for mard-rá. The presence of short a is particularly noticeable. The construction, however, is considered a vulgarity.

21. The accusative singular is often the same as the simple form of the nominative, the short a being discarded. In the plural also this often happens. The form ra is sometimes heard pronounced rá. On the whole, the dative and accusative cases are much alike, but, whereas the accusative case can, and often does, dispense with case endings, the dative cannot. In the case of verbs denoting “to give”, “to bestow”, etc., there are two objects, a direct and an indirect, the object given and the person to whom given. The direct object may be, and generally is, accusative in its simple or nominative form, the indirect object always is the dative with one of its case endings, eg., ma wath-í logh tha-ra shon-dár-án, I will show you my house (I me-of the house thee-to will show). Here logh, house, is in the accusative, the simple or nominative form, and tha-ra, to thee, in the dative.

22. The suffix of the locative case singular is short a, one of the endings of the genitive singular. It is in wide use, and is often difficult to distinguish from the ablative singular. In the plural the locative has no suffix. The various prefixes or prepositions governing this case will be found fully discussed later in this work 187.

23. The sign of the agentive case singular is long á, and it must always have this sign. It can never be left to be understood. The agentive case plural is the same as the nominative plural.

24. The ablative both of the singular and plural is the same as the locative; it is often very difficult to say with certainty which case is intended.

Examples of the noun ----

Guda ma-í pith na rav-í, then my father will not go (then me-of the father not will go). Pith, father, is in the nominative case singular, and is the subject of rav-í, will go.

Hál ham-esh en kí má gwashta, the matter is as I have said (the matter even this is as me by it has been said). Hál, circumstances, news, is in the nominative, and is the subject of en, is.

Álim bachh chi gush-í, what will Álim's son say (Álim-of the-son what will say)? Álim is in the genitive case singular governed by bachh, son.

Diwo ohí zíyáda burz en, the flame of the lamp is too high (the-lamp-of the-flame too high is), Diwo, lamp, is in the genitive governed by ohí, flame.

Áf-e áf en, it is pure water (it is nothing but water, water-of water it is). The same construction obtains in Persian, Urdú, etc.

Án mar khas-e-ar jawáb na dá sídháígha, that man will not give a straightforward reply to anyone (that man anyone-to reply not will give straightforward). The form khas-e-ar is made up of khas, any, anyone, the e of unity, 8, 90), and ar, one of the signs of the dative case. It is the indirect object after dá, will give. The direct object or accusative is jawáb, reply.

Má án-híára jawáb dátho thí ambráh er-khutha, I dismissed him, and appointed another servant (me by-him-to reply having-given another servant was placed).

The form án-híára, to him (78), is the dative or indirect object after dátho, having given, the accusative case or direct object is jawáb, reply.

Ikhtar gantrí ma khan, do not be so anxious (so much anxiety not make). The direct object, the accusative, is gantrí, thought, governed by khan, make.

Ní ma-í nírwár-a khaí khat, who will do me justice now (now me-of justice who will make)? In this example nírwár, justice, the accusative case after khat, will make, has its suffix a.

Guda duz thartho ákhta wath-í logh-a, the thief then returned home (then the-thief having-returned came himself-of the-house-to). The locative logh-a can be translated, to towards, or in the direction of his house. Wath-í, own, himself of 92.

Má wath-í dil-a gantrí khutha ki ma-na ravaghí bí, I thought to myself that I should have to go (me by my-self-of the-heart in reflection was made that me-to to go will be). The locative is dil-a, in my heart, Ma-na, to me, me-to 58.

Mard-e-á wath-í naríyán go má shwakta, a certain man sold me his horse (a certain-man-by himself-of the-horse to me was sold). In mard-e-á we have first the e of unity and secondly á the sign of the agentive case. Go má, to me 58.

Májitret-á kází diroghvand sebit khutha, the magistrate proved the native judge to be lying (the-magistrate-by the-native-judge proved was made). Májitret-á by the magistrate (6). It is only in such constructions as those shown in the last two sentences that the agentive case can be used 155.

Zar azh khísagh laghushta díghár chakha, the money slipped from his pocket on to the ground. The noun khísagh, a pocket, is in the ablative, although not followed by the suffix a. This we know from the presence of azh, which can govern the ablative only.

Ba-rau azh wath-í máth-a phol khan, go and ask your mother (go, from, yourself-of the mother enquiry make). The short a, the sign of the ablative, is here returned.

Má-í murthagh-ena sístán ham-esh en, these are our customs with regard to the dead (us-of the dead-of the custom even-this is). Murthagh-ena, of the dead, is that shown as the sixth form of the genitive 17.

Har hasht-ena sání en, all eight are present (all the-eight-of present is). Hasht-ena is in the genitive.

Wazír e rang-e síyáral mard en, the minister is much a wise person (the minister this kind-of wise man is). Rang-e is in the genitive case, second form.

Hudhá-í marzí en, it is the will of God (God-of the-will it is). Hudhá-í, of God, is the seventh form of the genitive 17.

Wazír en bádsháh-e, it is the king's minister (the-minister it is the-king-of).

Trámá-ena juretha, made of copper )copper-of made).

Nindokh-án dera ghází khán-egha, inhabitants of Dera Ghází Khán (inhabitants Dera Ghází Khán-of). The particle egha is the fourth form of the genitival suffix of the singular noun. 17.

E likainagh-e hál en, is this a secret (this hiding-of a-matter is)?

An ravagh-e zar-ání áragh-a, he is off to bring money (he is going money-of bring-to). The noun zar, money, gold, is here treated as a plural noun.

QUESTIONNAIRE

1. How many declensions are there in Balochí?
2. How is the plural formed from singular? What other language forms its plural in the same way?
3. How many cases are there? Name them. Which of these cases take suffixes?
4. Enumerate the suffixes of the genitive case singular and dative case plural?
5. With what cases would you expect to find the suffixes, á, a, ígh, ena, ánar, ár?
6. Translate into Balochí, father's son, he will go, yes, this is the real case, it is too high, do not worry, the man thought himself.
7. Translate into English, Mard-ánra, mard-ání, mard-e-á, ba-rav, azh án mard-a phol-khan.
8. What can you say concerning the words chikhtar and chikar?
9. Which is correct? do mard sání ant, or do mard-án sání ant? Give reason for your reply.
10. Give Balochí equivalents of : to empty; to fill, to sit down; to hold; to fall.

THE NOUN---CONTINUED

25. The noun thála, a company, raiding party, changes the final a to o before taking the case endings or suffixes, eg., thála, a company, thálo-án, companies, thálo-ání, of companies, azh thálo-a, from a company, thálo-á, by a company.

26. Very few nouns with long á undergo any change, Velá, time, in the locative and ablative singular becomes velah-á, at the time. Similarly, begáh, evening, becomes begah-á, in the evening. The shortening of the one vowel has led to the lengthening of the other.

27. The noun wázhá, master, becomes wázhah-án, in the nominative plural, on the analogy of velá, time, and begáh, evening. Hudhá, God, makes Hudhá-í, and hudhá-egh, in the genitive case singular. Exceptions of this class, however are rare.

28. Nouns ending in long í, that is in yá e ma'rúf, change this vowel into its corresponding short and then add y before taking the case endings ma Balochi-y-a esh-híar chi gushagh-en, what do you call this in Balochí? but the pronunciation of Balochíya differs little if at all from Balochía.

29. Nouns ending in o as a rule change that letter into av before taking the suffixes denoting the various cases, eg., daddo, a penny, azh daddav-a, from a penny, daddava-á, by a penny, daddav-án, ponies, daddav-ání, of ponies. These do not form a numerous class. Among exceptions are nakhó, an uncle, mokhó, a spider, sháthlo, a dove, go, a race, prize for a race, jo, a watercourse. These are regular, and follow the rules for nouns ending in a consonant.

30. Some noun form their plurals by the direct addition of the syllable gal. The most commonly heard are, zah-gal, a flock of kids, from zah, a kid; lerav-gal, a herd of camels, from lerav, a camel, jan-gal, a band of women, from jan, a woman, Marri-gal, men of Marrí tribe, phá-gal, a flock of márhór, from pháshan, a márhór, thíh-gal, others, from thíh, other. This ending is in wide use, and is made applicable to human beings, animals and things. Its use corresponds to that of log, people, in Urdú and Hindí (ef “folk” in English).

Obs 1 The affix gal is probably a corruption of the Persian ghol, a company, a band. In Balochí the letter o in words introduced often becomes a and á.

Obs 2 The same plural is found in Brhúí also, but not to so great an extent.

31. Another and rare form of the plural is the Pakkhto patronymic zai, usually pronounced zaí eg., Ahmad-zaí, the Ahmadzais, Tumar-zaí, the Turmarzais.

32. A few nouns form their plurals by the addition of the agh, to singular eg., murdán-agh, fingers, from murdán, a finger, phádh-agh, the feet, the legs, from Phádh, the foot. Of this class is galagh, a troops of horsemen.

33. One noun, at least, has a plural ending in kár eg., zál-kár, women, from zál, a woman. The regular plural ending in án is also in use. The same ending ár is found in katár, a string or number of camels.

Obs Some few Turkish words from their plural in lar and lar.

34. Among collective nouns are goram, a herd of cows, ramigh, a flock of goats, mehar, a flock of sheep, gwarphar, a flock of lambs, bag, a herd of camels, báhir, a herd of donkeys. These may be followed by a verb in the singular.

35. The following nouns are often treated as plurals, and may, therefore, be followed by a verb in the plural, bor, soup, stew, árth flour, darmán, medicine, jau, barley, hál, news, dán, corn, nohd, gram, renv, grass, dighár, land, gozhd, flesh, there are others.

Obs In Pakkhto also we notice the same thing. Thus zahr, poison, has zahr in the nominative case plural, but zahr-o in the oblique cases, showing clearly that it is considered a plural noun.

36. That form of the genitive singular which adopts the suffix a, as well as that which remains unchanged, generally precedes its governing noun. Genitives formed by the addition of any of the suffixes egh, egha, ígh, are usually separated from their governing nouns and used predicatively. The same ruling obtains in the case of the pronouns in the genitive or possessive case (58,65). The suffix egh is sometimes softened to simple e by discarding gh. The change is euphonic.

37. In compound nouns, such as máth-phith, parents, only the last number takes the suffixes eg., azh wath-í máth-phith-a phol khat, let him ask his parents, tha-í máth-phith-ání chakha ma-na híl n-en, I have no confidence in your parents.

38. In most cases the a of the genitive singular is a short soft breathing. There is a sharp and clear distinction between it and the long á of the genitive case. Among the tribes if the north the short guttural a is all imperceptible very often to the European on his first arrival in the country, in the south it is clearly heard and can be easily followed. On the whole, the tendency appears to be towards its retention.

39. In Balochí the locative and ablative cases are of wider use than in Urdú or Hindí. It is very often difficult, in the absence of the prefixes, to distinguish between the two cases. There is a difference, however, broadly speaking, the locative connotes "place", the ablative "manner".

Obs 1 The nasal n of the Balochí is of the nature of the same letter in Urdú and Hindí, but even lighter. It is not by any means the strong French nasal.

Obs 2 One of the signs of the genitive case, already explained, is e, it is always yá e majhul, and should be pronounced as "y" in the English word "easy", or as "ay" in the word "say". Some writers place nasal n after it. This is in error, it has no nasal sound.

Obs 3 The "e of unity" can enter into the construction of any of the cases when the same requires it. But there should be no jar in the pronunciation. If necessary, change the construction of the sentence. Usage is the sure guide. The use of this e makes or tends to make a sentence more emphatic.

Obs 4 Strictly speaking, there is no declension of nouns in Balochí. The oblique, construct, or formative cases are formed by means of affixes. The noun itself can hardly be said to undergo any change.

Obs 5 Sindhí masculine nouns that end in short u change that letter into short a in the formative. Thus dehu, a country, becomes deh-a jo, of a country, in the genitive singular, and deh-ane jo, of countries, in the genitive plural. There are other resemblances.

Obs 6 In both Balochí and Sindhí abstract nouns are sometimes met with declined.

Obs 7 The Sindhí has no prepositions, all particles that affect the noun in any way come after it.

40. The locative has no case ending nor any prefix. There is a tendency, however, to lengthen the final vowel of certain nouns when using this case eg., O sardár! O Chief! From Sardar, a chief. Similarly, in O Baloch! O Baloch! The o is lengthened considerably.

Further examples of the noun ---

E dighár sirkár-egh en, is this government land (this land government-of is)

E zahm sirdár-egh en, this is the chief's sword (this sword the-chief-of is)? It is the intonation that denotes whether a question has been asked. Sirdár for Sardar, the final vowel has been lengthened to ease the pronunciation 40.

Ráj Sindh-egha hacho gushagh-ant, the people of the Indus Valley say so. The egh and egha suffixes are in most general use with proper nouns.

Zahm laghári-e gwand en, the Laghári sword is short (the-sword the-Lagharís-of short is)

Zahm Gurshaní-e drázh en, the Gurshaní sword is long (the-sword the-Gurshaní-of long is)

Locative case. These two sentences show "direction towards", and should be considered "locative". Still more literal translations would be "turn to the hand of the right", "turn to the hand of the left". The e of, is one of the genitival suffixes. Its use with the adjective is on the analogy of the Persian 41.

Edha ma khoh-án shikár n-esti, here in the hills there is no shooting (here in the-hills shooting not is). Locative plural

Ma hínz láfa shír astí, is there milk in the churn (in the-churn in the-milk is? Locative

Sandúk níánwán chi chí asten, what is in the box (the-box in what things is)? Astí and asten, is, are sounded nearly alike.

Án hand-a shikár báz en, there is plenty of sport there (that place-in sport plentiful is).

Ma wath-í logh-a ravagh-án, I am going home (I, myself of the house-to, am going).

Druk-a jumb, just a little. The noun druk, a short time, is in the ablative, and has an adverbial sense of time.

Inna, ma e rang-a khan-án, no I shall do it this way (no, I this way-in shall do). Here the ablative rang-a denotes manner.

Má í nariyán azh sirdár-a gipta, I got this horse from the chief (me-by this horse from the-chief has been got). The prefix azh, from, clearly denotes the ablative.

QUESTIONNAIR

1. Are there any peculiarities in the declension of nouns ending in á and i?
2. Give the genitive singular of mokho, go, jo and the genitive plural of sháthlo, nakho, daddo.
3. How and for what purpose is the suffix gal used? Give an example
4. Explain the use of the suffixes zaí, kár, agh.
5. Give three examples of collective nouns. Are the following nouns singular or plural, dighár, dán, jau, árth?
6. What is the usual position in the Balochí sentence of genitive ending in egh, egha, ígh? Are there any other parts of speech that follow the same rule?
7. How are compound nouns treated as regards suffixes? Give an example
8. What two cases have neither prefixes nor suffixes?
9. Put into Balochí. What is in the house?
10. Translate into English. E túfak sardár-egh en.

CHAPTER V THE ADJECTIVE

41. The usual position of the adjective in Balochí is immediately before its noun. When so placed it is followed by the genitive sign e, yá e majhúl. This is generally the case, but not always, we sometimes hear the adjective used without the e of possession, just as we hear the noun very often used without the a of possession. This construction is borrowed into from Persian, and is often imitated in Urdú by writers who affect the Persian style.

Obs 1 This adjectival e is not to be regarded as “the e of unity”. The two may have come into languages at one and the same time, the probabilities are that they have but then uses and meanings are separated and distinct. “the e of unity” can nearly always be shown to denote “individuality” or “peculiarity”, whereas the genitive e of adjective, like the genitive a of the noun always connotes “possession” eg., zál, a woman, zál-a, a certain woman, sharr-e zál, a beautiful woman, or put more literally, a woman of beauty (beautiful).

Obs 2 The pronunciation of this genitive e, although clear, strong and distinct, is not nasal, as supposed by some.

Obs 3 In modern Persian the e of possession is for most part joined to the adjective and not the noun qualified. It is, however, pronounced yá e ma'rúf, that is as í, and not, as in Balochí, ya-e majhúl, or e.

Obs 4 The ya-e majhul of classical Persian has now become yá-e ma'rúf.

Obs 5 In Persian the adjective generally follows its noun, being joined to it by the azífat. In the modern language, however, the adjective is sometimes placed first, as in Balochí. In this case the izafat is dropped.

42. Adjective already ending in e, or in en, do not change when they precede and qualify a noun.

43. When an adjective is used by itself, or is placed after the noun its qualities, it usually takes one of the stronger genitival or possessive endings ena, etc, instead of the weaker and more generally heard e 17.

44. In a few adjectives that end in n the e of possession is inserted before this letter, which then becomes nasal e.g., jawán, good, jawá-e-n chhorav, a good boy. Thus we come to have the forms mazann, mazan, mazain, mazan-e, maz-e-n, maz-á-e-n, good, kisán, ksán, kisain, kisán-e, kisán-e, ksán-e, ksá-e-n, small.

Obs 1 In mazain and ksain, we have examples of a nasal n following a short vowel. This is not unusual, and is not with in Urdú also. Cases of the ordinary hard English n following a long vowel are quite common.

Obs 2 In the case of words ending in a double consonant, such as mazann, big, sharr, beautiful, stress should be laid on the final letters when pronouncing them.

45. The comparative degree is formed from the positive or simple form of the adjective by addition of thar, tar, or thir. Before the addition of these endings, which are borrowed from the Persian, the adjective has sometimes to be slightly modified. This is done to obtain an easier and smoother pronunciation eg., jawán, good, jawán-thar, better, mazann, etc, big mas-thar, bigger, ksán, etc, small, kas-thar, smaller, buz, high, buzá-thir, higher, sak, strong, sak-thar, stronger.

46. The Persian comparative geshtar, more and bather, better, are in general use in Balochí. the latter is sometimes used with other adjectives to form comparatives. The positives of these two, bes and bih, are not often heard.

47. The superlative degree is formed by putting the noun with which comparison is made in the ablative case, preceded by the prefix azh, than eg., án-azh thewaghe chhorav-án siyáral en, he is the cleverest boy (he than all the-boy clever is). Instead of azh thewaghe we may use azh kullán, the meaning remains the same. Other forms of azh, shi, chih, chí, 'sh,ch'. Which should be used in any particular case will depend on the word following the prefix and on pronunciation 188.

Obs this simple method of comparison is that which obtain in Urdú, etc, and has been borrowed from the Semitic languages.

48. The comparative and superlative degrees are not often heard. The place of the superlative is sometimes taken by the comparative. The adverb sakhía, very, exceedingly, extremely, is sometimes placed before an adjective in its simple or positive form so as to intensify its meaning eg., án zál sakhía sharr en, that woman is very beautiful. The genitive case of Hudha, God, that is Hudhá-í, of God, heavenly, is also used in a somewhat similar sense.

Examples of the adjective----

Jathaghe mál ba-kho en, where is the stolen property (the-struck property to-where is)? Note this use of the verb janagh, to strike. An alternative is phullithaghe mál.

Azh ín geshtar phráh en, it is wider than this (than this more wide it is)

Báz nariyán, hartal, larva, murtho shuthagh-án, many horses, mules and camels died, murtho shuthagh-aní, or murtho shuthagh-án, having died went.

Bal sakhía kár-khanokhí chí asten, the lance is a very useful weapon (the lance very working-making thing is)

Azgrez-ání zahm sidhá, the English sword is straight (the English-of the sword straight is)

Risála kirich chot en, the cavalry sword is curved (the cavalry-of the-sword curved is)

Tha-í túfak phur en, is your gun loaded (thee-of the gun full is)?

Inna, án horagh en, no, it is not loaded (no, it empty is)

Wath-í túfak sáf khan, guda phur khan, clean, your gun and load it (thyselself-of the-gun clean make filled make)

Án-hání, tof-án azh pagáthaghe ásín jurethagh-ant, their guns were made of cast-iron (them-of the-guns from cast iron were made)

Áz-hání otak jahlí phalawa bítha, they were encamped to the east (them-of the-camp east direction-to was (became)).

NUMERAL ADJECTIVES

49. The cardinal numbers are quite regular, and are easily remembered once the scheme is understood. A distinction is made, or supposed to be made, between yá and yak, one, yá is used before a noun beginning with a consonant, and yak before a noun beginning with a vowel, or when used by itself, say substantively. But this rule is very often violated, and we find yak used before a consonant.

50. The numbers from one to twenty are expressed as shown below. Twenty-one etc, is gíst o yak, gíst o do, to, up to thirty-nine. Forty is chhil, or do gíst, do gíst o yak etc. The conjunction o and may generally be left to be understood. Some of the tribes pronounce it as if it were a short u.

51. A less common method of expressing the numbers above sixty is by reckoning back in multiples of twenty eg., Duáz-dah gíst, two hundred and forty, nuh kham dwázdah gíst, two hundred and thirty-one, that is, nine less than two hundred and forty.

Where more than one form is given that in most general use placed first.

	Hazár	one thousand
	hadhár
	Lak	one hundred

	Khor	ten millions; many thousands

Obs The numeral Khor is from the Hindí, karor, one hundred lákhs, Sanskrit koti. In Balochí it has the general meaning of “many thousands”.

52. The ordinals are formed by addition of the syllable mí to the cardinals. The syllable mí is often heard pronounced wí. A few forms are irregular. After gíst, twenty, that is in the case of compound numbers, the particle mí, is added to the second member eg., gíst yakumí, twenty-first, etc.

Síumí	thirty
Chillumí	forty

Sadhumí	hundredth
Hazárumi	thousandth

53. Fractional numbers end in ak, less frequently in ik. Another method of denoting fractions is by adding the word bahar, part, share, to the ordinals eg., sadhumí bahar, one-hundredth.

Nem		one-half
Nemagh
Saiak		one-third
Chíarak		one-fourth
Phanjak		one-fifth
Sai páo		three-fourths
Yak o nem
Dedh		one-and-half
Sádhoán		one-half more

Obs Dedh is from the Hindí derh, and sádhoán from sárhe. The meanings have not changed.

54. Multiples when they denote quantity, and answer to the English word “fold”, are expressed by placing yak-e before cardinal numbers eg., yake sai, three-fold, yake chíár, fourth fold, yake phanch, five-fold and so on, “Double”, however, is dúrá, a corrupt form of the Urdú dohrá.

55. Another and less common method of expressing the multiple idiom is got by adding sar to the cardinals eg., do sar, double, sai sar, treble, threefold, and so on. The word tal is sometimes used to give this sense eg., sai tal, threefold, chíár tal, fourfold.

56. Multiples signifying time are expressed by adding the word bar, time, turn, season, to the cardinals eg., do bar-án, twice, sai bar-án, thrice, chíár bar-án, four times, and so on with the other numbers, “Once” makes, yá bar-e, again, thibar-e, often, báz-e bar-án.

57. All adjectives, including the numerals, may be used substantively, when so used may take the suffixes generally used with the noun eg., duhmí-á gwashta ma na kh-án, the second said that he would not come (the-second-by it was said “I not shall come”).

Further examples of the adjectives----

Guda har hasht-ena gozhd wárth-ant, then the whole eight ate flesh (then all eight-of flesh was eaten).

Shwá-r phanjáh phanjáh rupíya de-án, I shall give each of you fifty rupees (you-of fifty fifty rupees I shall give) this is how distribution is shown.

E hálwar rást bí tán ma-í wázhá báz vash bí, if this news be true may master will be much pleased (this news true be then me-of the master very pleased will be) as the adjective rást follows its noun there is no need of the suffix e.

Edha yá phír-e zál lath dast níánwán phedhagh-e, here comes an old woman with a stick in her hand (here one old woman stick hand in is coming) phír-zál, an old woman, a woman of old. The e is required because the adjective stands immediately before its noun.

Thewaghe áf kadah láfa mán-khutha-í, he put the whole of the water in the cup (all the-water the cup in was put (made) by him)

Ma har ro har ro lágghar bí-ána raptagh-án, I kept getting thinner every day. This sentence exemplifies two points already discussed (a) lágghar, thin, does not take the possessive ending e because it stand alone. (b) the continuation of the action expressed by har ro har ro and by the present participle bí-ána, becoming, gives to the adjective the force of a comparative degree, thinner. It is by such devices that the paucity of words in the language is made good and the difficulty of translation overcome.

Yá máh-e rosh-a thar-án kh-á-u, I shall return this day month. The sentence is idiomatic. Yá before a word beginning with a consonant.

Haw-án jauá-e-n bor athant, it was excellent stew (it good stew was). The noun bor, stew, is considered plural.

Má shutho án nariyán gipta pha sadh rupíya, I went and bought that horse for one hundred rupees (me-by having-gone that horse was taken for a-hundred rupees)

Shudhí-ánra naghan warain, feed the hungry (the-hungry-to bread feed). An example of an adjective used substantively Shudhí, hungry, shudhí-ánra, to the hungry.

Ma-na sádhoán sai de, give me three and half (me-to a-half-more-than three give)

Chughlí-khanokh-ání gwashtí-a báwar ma khan, do not trust backbiters (backbiters-of the word trust not make).

QUESTIONNAIR

1. What is the usual place of the adjective in the Balochí sentence? Are there any exceptions?
2. How does the use of the adjective in Balochí compare with the Persian construction?
3. How do you account for the presence of the latter e in sharr-e zál? How is it pronounced?
4. Does this e ever become an infix? Give an example
5. What are the rules for the formation of the comparative and superlative degrees?
6. Put into Balochí. He is exceedingly clever; it is heavenly.
7. Translate into Balochí, Seventy-three, thirty-six, fourfold, one-fourth?
8. How are the ordinals formed? Give three examples.
9. Put into Balochí: Give them five rupees each.
10. Translate into Balochí; Án zahr giragh-en.

THE PERSONAL PRONOUNS

58. The pronouns may be classified as Personal, Demonstrative, Relative, Correlative, Interrogative, Indefinite, Reflexive, and Pronominal. All are defective, and all to some extent irregular. The suffixes used are those in use with the noun, in some instances slightly modified.

In the following paradigms those forms that are in most general use have been placed first.

Singular

Case	Stem	1 st Form	2 nd Form	3 rd Form	English meaning
Nom	má	ma			I
Gen	ma	ma-í	ma-	ma-ni	My, mine
Dat	ma	ma-	ígh		To me
Acc	ma	na			Me
Loc	ma	ma-			On me, etc
Ag	ma	na			By me
Abl	ma	má má má			From me etc

Plural

Case	Stem	1 st Form	2 nd Form	3 rd Form	English meaning
Nom	má	má			We
Gen	má	má-í	má-		Our, ours
Dat	má	má-r	ígh		To us
Acc	má	má-r	má-ru		Us
Loc	má	má	ma-ra		On us, etc
Ag	má	má			By us
Abl	má	má			From us, etc

59. The stem or nominative form of the 1st personal pronoun is ma, and from it all other cases are made up. It has no suffix and nasal ending except when it precedes a word beginning with a vowel. It may then become man, or even man eg., tha-í zál man án, I am thy wife (thee-of the-wife I am). Its pronunciation is always full and clear, as if written mah. It should never be slurred. Its true sound appears to lie between that of man and mah, between a final nasal n and a final h.

60. The nominative plural is the nominative singular with vowel lengthened, ma, I, becoming má, we. This má is now the stem for the plural, and appears in all the other cases.

Obs 1 It has been suggested that before ún, are, and athun, were parts of the substantive verb, the letters kh are added to ma, we. The supposition is entirely erroneous. The letters kh belong to the verb, not the pronoun (141). Examples are má kh-ún ná-duráh, we are ill, má-athun ná-duráh, we were ill. These should not be written mákh-ún and mákh-athun.

Obs 2 The Persian pronoun of the 1st person is man, I, ma-ra, me, to me, má, we.

61. The genitive singular has three different suffixes to choose for, í, ígh and ní, and the genitive plural two, í and ígh. The suffix ní of the genitive singular is never used in the genitive plural of the 1st person, the root or stem of the plural is má throughout.

62. The form in most general use is ma-í. It precedes its noun. The form ma-ní generally follows the noun it qualifies. It is usually reserved for use in petitions eg., bráth ma-ní tha-í kághádh guar má ákhta, my brother, I have received your letter (brother mine, thee-of the-paper to me has come). The forms ma-ígh and má-ígh are used predicatively by themselves túfak ma-ígh en, the gun is mine (the-gun me-of is), logh-án, má-ígh ant, the houses are ours (the-houses us-of are). This tendency of the possessive form ending in ígh to be used predicatively has already been noticed in the case of the noun. As regards the pronoun, it is loosely observed in all those classes that affect this ending.

63. The dative and accusative cases singular are alike and are formed by the simple addition of the suffix na to the stem ma. In the plural, also, the dative and accusative are alike, but here there are alternative forms má-r or má-ra, to us.

64. The locative, genitive, and ablative cases, singular and plural, are alike, and are got by lengthening the stem vowel a to á.

Examples of the pronoun of the 1st person---

Ma Mazárí án, I am a Mazárí (I a-Mazárí am). Nom sing

E ma-í túfak en, this is my gun (this me-of the-gun is) Gen sing

Zahm má-ígh en, the sword is mine (the-sword me-of is) Gen sing

Ma-í athant do zál, I had two wives (me-of were two wives) Gen sing

Ma-na kal n-en tha-í ambráh ba-kho shutha, I do not know where your servant has gone (me-of information not is thee-of the-servant to where has gone) Dat sing

Án-hiá ma-na whár khutha, he has ruined me (him-by I (me) ruined have been made) Acc sing

E ma-na sakhía vash en, I like this very much (this me-to very pleasing is) Dat sing

Ma-na hacho gushagh-a azh lajj bíagh-e, I feel ashamed to say so (me-to, thus saying from, shame becomes) Dat sing
Án-hiá wath-í nariyán go má shwakta, he sold his horse to me (him-by himself-of the-horse to me was sold) Abl sing

Maroshí má yak nariyán bhá gipta, I bought a horse to-day (to-day, me-by a horse was bought) Ag sing

Tha-í bráth azh má mazann en, your brother is older than I (thee-of the-brother than I big is) Abl. Sing

Ní má rav-ún, may we go now (now we may go)? Nom plur

Má-í chukha híl na khanagh-en, do you not trust us (us on trust not thou art making)? Gen plur

Án lerv-gal má-ígh, that string of camels is ours (that string of camels us-of is) Gen Plur

Má-r hav-ikar zar azh kho dast khaf-í, where shall we get so much money (us-to so-much money from where to-hand will fall)? Dat. Plur.

Má-ra bángahá phajkár-í, he will recognize us in the morning (us in-the-morning he will recognize). Acc Plur.

Án go má ráh-a sangat bí, will be accompany us on the way (he with us the-way-on accompanying will be)? Abl plur

Ganokh, azh má phol-phurs khanagh-en, idiot, are you questioning us (fool, from us enquiry art thou making) Abl plur

Azh má phur na bítha, we could not fill it (from us filled not it became)

Azh báz rosh gwar má ákhta, it is long since he came to see me (from many days to me he has come) Gwar má, to me, or, to us.

65. The pronoun of the 2nd person is thau, thou. Among some of the tribes it is sounded as if written tho. In addressing one another and in conversation the Baloch very rarely makes use of the plural shwá, you. The use of the plural for the singular to denote respect is practically unknown in Balochistán. In fact, it is generally the other way about.

Obs The correct pronunciation of thau is somewhat difficult to explain. Its true sound can be learnt from the native only. It should not be pronounced as the English word “thou” the aspirate should be clear and distinct, tau is unintelligible.

Thau, Thou.

Singular

Case	Stem	1 st Form	2 nd Form	3 rd Form	English meaning
Nom	tha	tha-u	tho		Thou
Gen	tha	tha-í	tha-	ma-ni	Thy, thine

Loc	tha	tha-u	tha-ra		On thee, etc
Ag	tha	tha-u			By thee
Abl	tha	tha-u			From thee, etc

Plural

Case	Stem	1 st Form	2 nd Form	3 rd Form	English meaning
Nom	shuá	shuá	shá		You
Gen	shuá	shuá-í	shá-í	shwá-	Your, yours
Dat	shuá	shuá-	shwá-	ígh	To you

Abl	shuá	shuá	shá		From you, etc
		shuá	shá

66. In the 2nd personal pronoun there is no distinction made between the nominative and the agentive cases, neither in the singular nor in the plural. The context alone shows which is intended. There is seldom if ever any doubt, however.

Obs 1 When shuá, you, comes before ath, are, and athe, were, the verbal prefix kh is placed between the pronoun and its verb eg., shua kh-ath na-duráh, you are ill, shuá kh-athe ná-duráth, you were ill (60.obs). The pronoun with its verb is then pronounced as one word shwa-kath, you are, and shuákathe, you were.

Obs 2 The personal pronoun of the 2nd person is Persian is tu, thou, and shumá, you.

Obs 3 The order of the persons in Balochí is the reverse of that observed in English. thus the English “you and I”, becomes “I and you”, “he and I”, “I and he” however, obtains.

Obs 4 The personal pronouns may every often be omitted where this is not permissible in English. The verbal termination usually suffices to indicate the person and the context the signification.

67. The genitive cases are formed by the addition of í or ígh to the stems tha and shwá respectively. The forms thai-ígh and shwá-ígh stand alone, predicatively, they do not precede their nouns. In the genitive plural shwí is occasionally heard.

68. The dative and the accusative cases are alike in both numbers, and are formed by the addition of the letter r and the syllable ra to the respective stems. Shár is shwár with w suppressed.

69. The locative, agentive and ablative cases call for no special remarks. They are the same as the respective nominatives. The shortened form shá is in every-day use.

Examples of the pronoun of the second person---

Thau ba-kho ravagh-en, where are you going (thou to where art going) Nom sing

Tha-í túfak gandagh en, your gun is worthless (thee-of the gun worthless is ) Gen sing

Azh shwá chí chí phol-khanagh-etha, what all was he asking you (from you what what was he asking)? Note the force of chi chi. Abl plur

70. There is no pronoun of the 3rd person in Balochí. This want is made good by using the proximate and remote demonstratives e, haw-e, this, and án, haw-án, that, to denote according to the context of the sentence, he, she, it.

QUESTIONNAIRE

1. How many classes of pronouns are there? Name them.
2. Distinguish, in Balochí, between “I” and “by me”.
3. Put into Balochí, it is mine, no, it is yours.
4. Explain the formation mákhún, mákhathún, shwákheth and shwákhthe.
5. When do you use tha-ígh and shwá-ígh?
6. If there is no pronoun of the 3rd person, how would you translate “he”, “she”, “it”?
7. Explain the forms tho and shwí.
8. Translate into Balochí; what has happened to your hand?
9. Put into Balochí; the bullet struck him in the foot?
10. Translate into English; Zahm má-r manzúr en?

THE DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS.

71. The proximate demonstrative in the nominative singular has three different forms, esh, e, í, meaning this, he, she, it, according to the context of the sentence, and the remote demonstrative one form, án, that, he, she, it. Both these pronouns can be intensified by the prefix ham or haw in any of the cases, singular or plural.

Obs 1 The prefix ham is the Pársi, Pehlevi, and Zend ham, and corresponds to the Sanskrit sam. It is of wide use in Urdú, Pakkhto, etc., meaning also, even, etc.

Obs 2 As in Sindhi so also in Balochí, the personal pronoun of the 3rd person is now lost---if it ever existed. All that we meet with is the pronominal í, he etc, plural ísh, etc

Obs 3 In Persian the demonstratives in, this, án, that with their plurals in-há, an-há, take the place of a 3rd personal pronoun

Obs 4 This in was at one time im (Of im-sál, this year).

Obs 5 The emphatic forms in Persian are ham-in and ham-án

72. Before a word beginning with a vowel the form e and í are not used. In such cases esh, ham-esh, haw-esh, are made use of, according to the needs of the sentence eg., thaí túfak esh en, this is your gun, tha-í túfak ham-esh en, this, and no other, is your gun.

73. The form í, this, he, she, it, is sometimes made nasal eg., man ín rosh-án, nowadays, man ín hál-a, in this case, under these circumstances. This form is not shown in the paradigm given below. It is emphatic, not a separate form.

Esh, this.

Singular

Case	Stem	1 st Form	2 nd Form	3 rd Form	English meaning

Loc	esh	esh-ra			On this, etc
Ag	esh	esh-ía			By this, etc
Abl	esh	esh-ia			From this, etc

Plural

Case	Stem	1 st Form	2 nd Form	3 rd Form	English meaning
Nom	esh	esh-án	e		These, etc
Gen	esh	esh-ání	esh-ia		Of these, etc
Dat	esh	esh-	esh-		To these, etc
Acc	esh	ánra	íára	esh-	These, etc
Loc	esh	esh-		án	On these, etc
Ag	esh	anra			By these, etc
Abl	esh	esh-án esh-án esh-án			From these, etc

74. The declension of the pronouns, as will have been seen, closely resembles that of the noun. In the case of esh, this, the resemblance is nowise violated. The nominative plural is formed by the simple addition of án to the nominative singular, in the genitive singular there are the endings í and ía, and in the genitive plural the substantival suffix ání is joined to the stem. The guttural suffixes ígh, etc, are probably never heard.

75. The dative and accusative cases singular are alike, and have three forms to choose from, íar, íára and ía. The form esh-íar is that most generally heard, especially in the case of the dative ar (ár) is pre-eminently a dative ending. In the plural also these two cases are the same, and formed by adding ánra to the stem, or, we might say, by adding ra to the nominative case plural.

76. There is no difference between the locative and ablative cases singular both end ía, in short a. The locative, agentive and ablative cases plural are alike and the same as nominative plural. The agentive singular ends in íá, in long á. In no case can short a represent the agentive case in noun or pronoun.

Obs 1 Not too much stress should be laid on the short a, the long final á should be clear and distinct, when pronouncing it there should never be any doubt left as to its presence. The difference between the two sounds is clearly brought out in the case of ma, I and má, by me.

Obs 2 The dative and accusative esh-íar will sometimes be heard pronounced esh-íár.

Examples of the proximate, demonstrative pronoun---
Inna, ham-esh ma-ígh en, no, this mine. Nom sing
Esh-í máth ba-kho shutha, where has its mother gone (it-of the mother to where has gone). Gen sing
Esh-íar chíkhtar zar dátha-í, how much money has he given to him (him-to how-much money has been given by-him)? Dat sing

Esh-íar b-il de, án-híar hundí-khan, let this one go, get hold of that one (thus-one leave, give, that-one take hold of) hundí-khanagh, to take care of, take hold of, look after.

Acc sing

Esh-í-á chikhtar dán drushta, how much grain has been ground (him-by how-much grain has been ground)? Ag sing

'sh-esh-ía drázh ath, it was longer than this (than-this long it was). 'sh-esh-ía is for ash esh-ía, or azh esh-ía, than this. It should be pronounced as one word. Abl sing

Thí bar-e esh-ánra wám na de-án, I will not lend to them a second time (another time them-to credit not I will give) dat plur

Rosh-e-a esh-ánra gind-án, I shall be even with them some day (some-day them I will see). The sentence is idiomatic. Acc plur

77. The remote demonstrative is án, that, he, she, it. This stem is found in all the cases singular and plural. As in the case of esh, this, the prefixes ham and haw are used to intensify its meaning, in any of the cases, singular and plural.

Obs Dames has án or anh in the nominative case singular. The separate can hardly influence the nasal.

78. It is only when used as personal pronouns, that esh, this, and án, that, are declined. When used adjectively, before a noun, they are demonstratives pure and simple, and undergo no change eg., ní esh-í sír bítha, his marriage has just taken place, haw-e zál-a sír bítha, is this woman married? Án-hí sír dí bítha, his marriage also has taken place, haw-án mard sír bítha, is that man married? Án mard-á gwashta, that man said.

79. The declension of the two pronouns is thus very much alike. In the proximate, however, the letter h is in the stem, or root, for the reason that it is part of it, and not the aspirate. In the remote demonstrative h is the leading letter in all the suffixes. That is all the real difference there is between the declensions of the two pronouns. The form án-híe is a softened án-íegh. 36

QUESTIONNAIRE

1. How many demonstrative pronouns are there? Name them.
2. As demonstratives only, to what changes are these subject?
3. In what cases do you find eshía, eshíar, eshán, eshánra?
4. Explain the use of ham and haw? Give examples. What is the origin of these prefixes?
5. What is the suffix of the agentive case?
6. Put into Balochí: I will be even with him some day?
7. Translate into English; Ma wath haw-án-hání nirwár khan-án?
8. By how many different forms is the genitive singular of án represented?
9. What is the Balochí for, four-footed, former, a bridge, proud?
10. Give the English meanings of; Laghar, chur, gar, charagh, dem-a juzitha.

THE RELATIVE AND OTHER PRONOUNS

80. The relative pronoun, quá relative pronoun, can hardly be said to exist in Balochí. The Baloch takes small interest in the complex sentence, and in the compound sentence none at all. He says what he has to say in very few words, bald, granted, but lucid and understood of the listener. One cannot know the language and misunderstand the man. His talk is Herbraic, biblical, simple sentence is strung on to simple sentence in a pleasing style that can be imitated in few other languages without offending the ear. There is no need of a conjunction even. With all this the Baloch remains a peerless story-teller.

81. The particle ki takes the place of a relative pronoun, just as it does in Persian. It is indeclinable, of course, and so, very often left to be understood. The oblique cases of this pronoun representing the English "whose", "whom", are got by placing ki before the various cases of the demonstratives esh, this, etc, and án, that, etc eg., e nariyán ham-esh en ki esh-íar má bhá gipta, this is the horse that I bought, haw-án chhorav en ki án-hí pith maroshi bángahá murtho shutha, that is the boy whose father died this morning. Put literally, these two sentences read, this horse the-very-horse is that it me-by was bought, that-very boy he-is that him-of the-father to-day this-morning having-died went. The correlative is sometimes left to be understood eg., án zál má dítha Haddiání bítha, the woman I saw turned out to be a Haddiání (that woman me-by seen a-Haddiání was (became)). Even this construction is at times still further shortened by leaving out the demonstrative eg., duz má dítha tha-í bráth bítha, the chief I saw was your brother (the-chief me-by seen thee-of the brother was became)).

82. As might have been expected, compound relatives, to not form a numerous class. Among the more common are án ki, who, he who, whoever, hark has ki, whoever, har ki, whatever, har chí ki, whatever.

CORRELATIVE PRONOUN

83. Only few words are used correlatively, án-khtar, that much, haw-án-khtar, just that much, ikhtar, this much, ham-ikhar, haw-ikhtar, just this much, just so much. The Persian Formation ín qadr, so many, is also heard.

Examples of the relative and correlative---

Haw-án ki shart janth, án hí khush-án, I will kill him who gambles (that-very-one that gambles, him even will I kill). The example is from Dames textbook. The particle hí, even, is from the Urdú. It is seldom heard in Balochí, and then only in the south.

Án-híar ki zar báz en, án-híar báz kh-á-íth, to him that hath shall be given (him-to that money much is, him-to much will come). Kh-á-íth, it may come, is the contingent future, 3rd person singular. In proverbial sayings, and whenever there is a doubt, the contingent future should be used.

Gwar khas-e ki zar hechí n-en án hechí na dá, he who has nothing will give nothing (with him that gold any not is he any not will give).

Rosh-e ki zar gon na bí guda thau chí khan-en, what will you do on the day that you have no money (the-day-on that money with not will be then thou what wilt do)?

INTERROGATIVE PRONOUN

84. Of the interrogative there is only one that is subject to inflection, viz, khaí, who? It refers to human beings only. It is used substantively by itself, never adjectively, before a noun. It has, moreover, no plural---unless we say that the singular and plural are alike.

Khaí, who?

Case	Stem	1 st Form	2 nd Form	English meaning
Nom	kha	khaí		Who?
Gen	kha	kha-í	kha-igh	Whose?

Ag	kha	iar		By whom?
Abl	kha	kha-ía kha-ía kha-ia		From whom, etc

Obs 1 We are given khái and even kaí as the simple form of this pronoun. The nominative form is, however, khai. The sound is that of k aspirated and never that of kh.

Obs 2 Kha-íar of the dative and accusative is sometimes heard pronounced as if written khaíár.

85. The suffixes are those met with in the declension of the noun and the other pronouns. The agentive, as always, ends in the long vowel á. In the dative kha-íar appears to be preferred to kha-íára.

86. The interrogative kithán, what? Which? Is distinctive and is used adjectively before a noun expressed or understood- eg., án kithán mar en, who is that man (that what man is)? Ázmúda kithán táríkh bí, on what date will the examination take place (the-examination what date will be)? It does not inflect, and cannot ordinarily take a suffix.

87. The pronoun chi or cho, what? Can be used substantively in its first form and substantively only in its second, eg., án-hí pith-á tha-ra chi gwashta, what did his father say to you (him-of the-father-by thee-to what was said)? Án chi savav-a hacho gush-í, why should he say so (he what reason-for thus should speak)? Tha-ra cho bítha, what is wrong with you (thee-to what has become)?

88. Of similar import but of more restricted use is thán, what? Which? It is generally heard used before hand, a place, and rang, way, manner eg., má thán hand-a nind-ún, where shall we stay (we what place-in will stay)? Esh-íar thán rang-a din-í, how will he tear it (it what way-in he will tear)?

89. The interrogative chíkhtar, chikhtar, chikar, may mean, according to the context, how much? Or how many? They can be used substantively or adjectively, but undergo no change. When used adjectively the verb following is often in the singular. The Persian equivalent chi qadr is also in use.

Examples of the interrogative pronouns----

Án mard khai en, who is that man (that man who is)?

E túfak azh kha-ía bhá gipta, from whom have you bought this gun (this gun from whom has been bought (by you)?

Án-hí sír kithán rosh bí, what day will his marriage take place (him-of the-marriage what day will be)?

Kithán dighár th-ígh en, which is your land (which land thee-of is)?

Thán hand-a nindagh-en, where do you stay (what place-in you are staying)?

Thán rang-a rau, how will he go (what way-in he will go)?

Pha chigregh-en, why are you weeping (for why thou art crying)?

Chi hál en, what is the news (what news is)?

Chikhtar mard sání ant, how many men are present (how-many men present are)?

INDEFINITE PRONOUNS

90. Except khas, any, anyone, and its compound hark has, everyone, none of the indefinites are subject to declension. This pronoun refers to animates, less frequently to manimates, and is seldom used adjectively. Its declension is quite regular.

Khas, anyone

Stem	1 st Form	2 nd Form	3 rd Form	4 th Form	English meanin
khas	khas				Anyone
khas	khas	khas-a	khas-e	khas-i	Of anyone
khas	khas-ar	khas-ára			To anyone
khas	khas-ai	khas-ára			Anyone
khas	khas-a				On anyone,
khas	khas-á				By anyone
khas	khas-a				From anyone

Obs khas is the Persian kas without the aspirate.

91. Other indefinites are chí, hachí, hech, hechí, any; ikhtar, ham-ikhtar, so much; har chí, hamuchí, ham-chíz, everything, chí-e, something, chí-e chí-e, just a little, a trifle, hechí na, chí na, nothing, báz, many, kham, a few, geshtar, more; kharde, some; chandí, some, yak-áptíya, one another, thí, phíthí iptí, other, another, thi khas-e, some else, thí chí-e, something else; thí chí na, nothing else, theghí thewaghe, all, drust, kull, las, all, the whole, kullán-phajía, altogether, hardo, both, chí and hechí are sometimes used with reference to animate objects.

Obs As in Persian, har translates either “each” or “every”

Examples of the indefinite pronouns----

Khas-e gwashtí na gir-ant, they will not listen to what anyone says (anyone-of-the-saying not they take ) Gir-ant is also the contingent future. It here denotes “habit”.

Thau khas-e gwashtí-a na guagh-en, you do not listen to what anyone says (thou anyone-of the-saying not art taking)?

E thaukh-a khas-í dema ma khan, do not speak of this before anyone (this conversation anyone-of before not make)

Khas-e-a ki duzí bí, if anyone have his property stolen (anyone-of it theft take place)

Túfak wath-í ki thigh-í-egh en, is the gun your own, or does it belong to someone else (the gun yourself-of or other-of (someone-else-of) is)? The form thíghíegh is worth noting. It can be used predicatively only.

Ham-chíz-egh namuna ma-na be-ya-ai de, bring me a sample of everything (everything-of a sample me-to bring give).

Khas-e e rang-a gushagh-e khas-e án rang-a, one says this another that (one this way-in speaks one that way in)

Thí bar-e khas-e-ar zá ma de, do not abuse anyone a second time (a-second time anyone-to abuse not give)

Thau zánagh-en ma-í wájha thí khas n-en, you think there is no one like you (thou knowest “me-of like another individual not is”).

Án-híá tha-ra hechí na dáṭha, he gave you nothing (him-by thee-to anything not was given).

Ma-ra hechí gunáh n-en, I have committed no fault (me-to any fault not is)

Án-hí bráth hechí n-en, he has no brother (him-of brother any not is)

Án yá bar-a humuchí lotagh-e, he wants everything at once (he one time-at everything is wanting)

Hainuchí báz en, there is plenty of everything (everything plenty is)

Guda báz ákhtagh-án, then many came.

Ma-í halk-a geshtar dighár vasm en, in my village most of the land is cultivated (me-of the-village-in most-of the-land cultivated is).

Go thí chí-a waragh-e, he eats it with something else (with other something he is eating).

Má duzí chí na khuṭta, I have committed no theft (me-by theft any not has been done).

Kull Sardar kh-á-y-ant, all the chiefs will come.

REFLEXIVE PRONOUNS

92. In the sentence “he sent his son” we are left in doubt as to whose son was sent. In English we get over the difficulty by changing the wording, when necessary, to “he sent his own son”. In Balochí “own” is denoted “self”. In the genitive it refers back to the true subject of the sentence and means “own”, eg., án-hí bachh shashtátha-í, he sent his son (him-of the-son was sent by him, that is, the son of someone else; but wath-í bachh shashtátha-í, he sent his own son (himself-of the-son was sent by him). The distinction is clear. In its declension wath is quite regular.

Wath, self

Obs1 Some of the formations given are very rarely heard eg., wath-ání, wath-igha. but they exist, and are understood.

Obs 2 The forms wath-igh and wath-igha are used after the nouns they qualify.

93. There are two other reflexive pronouns, or words that act as such, jind and but. Both come from Sindhí, and primarily mean “body”. In Balochí, however, they have come to connote, self, oneself, own eg., e ma-í jind top en, this is my own cap; e ma-í jindegh en, this is my own, wath-í jindár jatha-í, he struck himself, but is seldom used.

94. A still greater emphasis is obtained by a repetition or duplication of these reflexives eg., án wath-í wath shutha, he went himself, he went in person, Mohan wath-í jind ákhta, Mohan came himself, Mohan came in person. When speaking of one’s own property jind is the pronoun generally used.

Examples of the reflexive pronouns---

Bádsháh-á saláh khutha go wazír-a wath-ígha, the king consulted his minister (the-king-by counsel was made with the-minster himself-of). In everyday Balochí this would be Bádsháh-á saláh khutha go wath-í wazír-a.

Má-án-híar gwar wa lotainth, I summoned him before myself wa is shortened from of wath, idiomatically used after gwar, near, with, it should be carefully noted.

E díghár tha-í wath-igh en, is this land your own (this land thy own is)?

Pha chi pha wath-án hálwar na khanagh-en, why do you not talk to one another (for why among themselves conversation not you are making)? Pha wath-án, among yourselves, is the locative plural.

Man wath-án chí gushagh-ant, what are they saying themselves (among themselves what they are saying)?

Thau wath wath-ára síyáral zánagh-en, you think yourself clever (thou thyself, thyself clever knowest). Note this use of zánagh, to know.

Gokh-án án-hí jindegh ant, the cows are his own (the-cows his own are)

Áz wath-í jind-ár knush-íth, he may kill himself (he himself, himself may kill).

THE PRONOMINALS

95. In Balochí the pronominal are found with verbs only, attached as suffixes. They are not used as prefixes or influxes. The chief benefit derived from their use appears to be a prevention of a too frequent repetition of the ordinary pronouns, or of a subject or agent already mentioned. Being short and explicit, they are particularly suited to Balochí. Their force and scope, however, cannot well be understood and appreciated until the verb has been considered and mastered by the student 98, 154, 156, 158.

96. In order of the persons these pronouns are----

Ún, by me

E, by thee, by you

Í, he, his, to him, him, by him

Ish, they, their, to them, them, by them.

97. The two in most general use are í and ísh. They are often used indiscriminately, the singular for the plural. Moreover, both are inserted sometimes at the end of a verb when not required at all except to round off the sentences! But these practices and niceties the student will do well to leave to the Baloch, they are not for imitation, because in correct. There should never be two subjects or two agents.

Obs 1 And here a word as to then pronunciation, the final short a of the participle merges into the pronominal í so as to form one sound, there is, and should be, no hiatus eg., shuthai, he went, not shutha-í with stress on the a. that will happen if the two vowels be pronounced separately.

Obs 2 It is incorrect to say that these two vowels, the short a of the participle and the long í of the pronominal, coalesce and give the sound e, that is yá e majhál.

Obs 3 The pronoun of the 2nd person, e, to wit, is yá e majhál.

Obs 4 In Sindhí the pronominal are found attached to nouns, verbs, and adverbs. They are, in order of the persons me, e, ae, for the singular, and ún (hún), ia, ne (na), for plural. All are traceable to the Prakrit and Sanskrit. When attached to verbs they may represent any of the cases except the nominative.

Obs 5 In Pakkhto the pronominal may represent any of the cases except the nominative and the vocative. In this dialect they are generally used detached, not as in Persian, Sindhí and Balochí, linked to other parts of speech, except in a few particular cases. In order of the person they are me, de, e for the singular, and mn (muh, nm, ium), mu (muh, um, vum), e for the plural. They are traceable to the Persian, Sanskrit and Prakrit.

Obs 6 The affixed pronouns in Persian are am, aí, ash, for the singular, and í mán, í tán, í shán for the plural.

Obs 7 The separate pronouns are or can be made emphatic, the pronominal are not emphatic, and can hardly be made so, no matter where placed.

Obs 8 If we wish for a fuller illustration of pronominal affixes we must turn to the Arabic. Here the scheme is more easily followed and understood.

A few examples will show this;

In Arabic there are five singular pronominal affixes í, me, masc and fem, ka, thee, masc, ki, thee, fem, ku, him, it, há, her, it.

Similarly for the plural there are another five ná, us, masc and fem, kum, you, masc, kun-na, you, fem; hum, them, masc, hun-na, them, fem

These particles are found affixed to nouns, verbs and prepositions. By way of easy example, let us take the latter. The preposition l means "to". Thus by combination lí comes to mean to, la-ka, thee, masc, la-ki, to thee, fem, la-ku, to him, to it, la-ha, to her, to it. And so also in the case of the plural.

Examples la-ná ubn, we have a son (to-us a-son (is)), la-kun-na ukhi, you have a sister (to-you a-sister (is)), la-hum malik, they have a king (to-them a-king (is)). And so with remaining persons. The substantive verb is left to be understood. In jalahú-hu, they opened it, hu represents the pronoun "it". In short the whole system is clear, Simple and fixed.

Examples of the pronominals----

Ún, by me      Har do yak-e túfak-a jath-ún, I killed both with one shot (both one gun-with were killed by-me).

E, by you      Namásh-a der na khuth-e, you have not been long at prayers (prayers-at delay not has been made by-me).

Í, he      Zar gipta shutha-í, he took the gold and went off (the-gold having-taken went he). Shvtha being an intransitive verb, í can only mean "he".

Í, his Bádsháh-e ath ki dem-a dánagh ákhta-í, there was a certain king on whose face came a boil (a-certain king was that face-on a-boil came his). The ki and the í go to make up something in the shape of the relative “whose”. The simpler form would be: Bádsháh-e ath ki án-hí dem-a dánagh-e ákhta.

Í, to him Guda bachh-e bítha-í, then he had a son (then a-son became to-him). This is called “the dative of possession” (202). This use of the verb “to become” obtains in Urdú, and Hindí, etc.

Í, him Hamodha mir-án-í ki thí khas ma gind-í, I will fight him there, so that no one else may see (there I will fight-him that another not may see). The object and accusative is í, him, after the verb mir-án, I will fight. Note that in mir-án, I will fight, the ordinary n has taken the place of the nasal no before the vowel í. Note, also, that the negative before the contingent future is generally as here ma, lest, and not na

Í, by him Azh chhorav-a phol khutha-í, he asked the boy (from the boy, questioning, was made by-him).

Ish, they Nawán-be-y-á-y-ant-ish, perhaps, they may come (perhaps may come-they). Note how the word beyáyant is built up, be is the prefix of the contingent future, the letter y is required before vowel á, á is the root of the verb ágh, to come, the second y is required to help out the sound of the following short a in ant; ant is the verbal ending of the 3rd person plural.

Ish, their Ní khas ne-sten, rand asten-ish, there is no one here now, only their traces (now, anyone, not is, trace is-their) Nesten is formed na asten, it is not, and asten from asten, the nasal n having to be hardened before the vowel in ish.

Ish, to them Ákhtagh-ant dír-e dighár-e avzár-e tretha-ish, when they came into a far country they met a horseman (they came a distant country), a horseman met-to-them). Note that tretagh to meet, governs the dative.

Ish, them Ma-í dast-án basthagh-ant, wath bozhíth-ísh, let him who fastened my hands undo them (me-of the hands fastened, himself let him undo-them) Bozhíth, let him unite, is the contingent future in its precative sense.

Ish, by them Ma-í gosh dí buríthagh-ant-ish, dumb dí buríthagh-ant-ish, my ears they have cut off, my tail also they have cut off (my ears also have been cut off by-them, my tail also has been cut off by-them).

7. Name as many of the indefinite pronouns as you can remember?
8. What English meaning or meanings can you attach to khas-e?
9. Give a complete list of the pronominals with their various meanings in English?
10. Explain the words kithán and thán?

CHAPTER IX

THE VERBS.

98. All Balochí verbs may be divided into three classes; intransitive, transitive, and compounds. They are all conjugated after one model. Only a few are defective and only a few irregular. The scheme of the verb, as a whole, is that of the same part of speech in Persian.

THE SUBSTANTIVE VERB

99. The substantive verb “to be” is an auxiliary, and defective, being found in two tenses only, the present imperfect and the past imperfect, otherwise called the indefinite tenses. As it enters largely into the construction of every other verb, it has to be considered first.

Obs 1 In the tables given above those forms that are in most general use have been placed first. There may be others.

Obs 2 Those in ast had from the Persian, while those having th and th savour of the Urdú and Hindí.

Obs 3 In asti the letter I has the sound of e, of yá e majhúl, th and thi are pronounced ae in Urdú, but shorter of course.

100. The form given under the heading “in composition” are worth careful attention. Once these are mastered and remembered the conjugation of almost any verb in the languages becomes a simple matter. It will be noted, for instance, that the leading suffixes for the singular are, in order of the person, án, en, e, and for the plural, ún, en, ant or án.

Examples of the substantive verb---

Sahí ne-y-án, I do not know (inform not I am). The letter y is required to help out the sound of the vowel: ne is converted na, not.

Thv-en ganokh, thou art a fool, the letter v is inserted to prevent the two vowels clashing.

Tha-ra chon-en, what is the matter with you (thee-to what is)? The letter n in cho is required before the vowel in en.

Wazír wath sání nestath, the minister himself was not present. Nestath is the same as na astath, which cannot be used. In the same way we have nesti for na asti, and nesten for na asten.

Án-hí phith, ná-duráh ne-y-ath, his father was not ill (him-of the father ill not was)

Sáin má chí sahí ne-y-ún, my good sir, we know nothing about it (sir, we anything knowing not are).

Baloch ne-y-ant, they are not Baloches (Baloches not they are).

Tha-í dost astathant, were they your friends (thee-of the friends they were)?

Kullán jar-án ki logh-a athant mái dátha-í, he gave us all the clothes in the house (all the-clothes that the-house-in were us-to were given-by-him)

Shawá khai eth, who are you (you who are)? But the singular is generally used.

101. Balochí infinitives end in agh. To this rule there are very few exceptions. By dropping this slightly guttural syllable we come by the root, eg., thashagh, to gallop, to run, root, thash; juzagh, to walk, to go, root, juz.

102. this root is also noe of the forms of the 2nd person singular of the imperative, and as might have been expected on the analogy of other eastern languages, form it are formed the contingent future and absolute future tenses.

The contingent future

Thash-án, I may run, etc.

Singular

1. Thash-án, I may run, I may gallop
2. Thash-en, thou mayest run
3. Thash-íth, he may run

Plural

1. Thash-ún, we may run
2. Thash-eth, you may run
3. Thash-ant, they may run

Examples of the contingent future---

Miragh, to die, root, mir, mir-án, mir-en, mir-íth, mir-ún, mir-eth, mir-ant.

Tharagh, to return, root, thar, thar-án, thar-en, thar-íth, thar-ún, thar-eth, thar-ant

Nindagh, to set root, nind, nind-án, nind-en, nind-íth, nind-ún, nind-eth, nind-ant

The absolute future

Thash-án, I shall run, etc.

Singular

1. Thash-án, I shall run, I shall gallop
2. Thash-en, thou wilt run
3. Thash-í, he will run

Plural

1. Thash-ún, we shall run.
2. Thash-eth, you will run
3. Thash-ant, they will run

103. Both tenses it will be seen are formed by adding the present imperfect substantive verb to the root thash. The 3rd person singular contingent future takes the íth and the same person in the absolute future í, which is but a softened form of íth. The distinction, however, is as often neglected as observed. In the 2nd persons plural of both tenses the ending en is in everyday use. Thash-en, you may run, or, you will run. This may have arisen through confusing the singular with the plural.

104. The only real differences between the contingent and absolute future tenses lies in their 3rd persons singular; the contingent future generally ends in íth, the absolute future in í. Put otherwise, the ending íth will nearly always denotes “may” and the suffix í “will”, the opposite seldom.

105. The Baloches themselves generally use these two tenses promiscuously and as if they denoted present time, not infrequently as if they denoted present habitual time.

Obs The examples given under the contingent future are equally illustrated of the absolute future, except in the 3rd persons singular, which become mv-í, thar-í, juz-í, ras-í, respectively.

106. The third tense in the verb scheme is the present imperfect. It is formed from the infinitive by the simple addition of the verbal endings an, en, e, for the singular, and ún, en, ant for the plural. The suffix eth is also in use with the 2nd person plural as an alternative to en.

The present imperfect

Thashagh-án, I am running, etc

Singular

1. Thashagh-án, I am running, I am galloping
2. Thashagh-en, thou art running
3. Thashagh-e, he is running

Plural

1. Thashagh-ún, we are running
2. Thashagh-en, thou art running
3. Thashagh-ant, they are running

] Examples of the present imperfect---

Miragh-án, I am dying, miragh-en, miragh-e, miragh-ún, miragh-en, miragh-ant.

Tharagh-án, I am returning, tharagh-en, tharagh-e, tharagh-ún, tharagh-en, tharagh-ant

Nindagh-án, I am sitting, nindagh-en, nindagh-e, nindagh-ún, nindagh-en, nindagh-ant

Juzagh-án, I was walking, juzagh-eń, juzagh-e; juzagh-ún, juzagh-en, juzagh-ant.

Rasagh-án, I am arriving, rasagh-eń, rasagh-e; rasagh-ún, rasagh-eń, rasagh-ant.

107. The fourth tense is the past imperfect. Here also the infinitive remains unchanged throughout, taking the endings ethán, etheń, etha to form the singular, and ethún, etheń, ethant to make up a plural (astathún, etc). The 3rd person singular has an alternative form ending in eth, and the 3rd person plural an alternative in ethán. Thus the 3rd person plural and 1st person singular may be alike. We shall often find this (án, I am, and án, they are).

(4)

The past imperfect

Thashagh-ethán, I was running, etc.

Singular

1. Thashagh-ethán, I was running, I was galloping.
2. Thashagh-etheń, thou wert running.
3. Thashagh-etha, he was running.

Plural

1. Thashagh-ethún, we were running.
2. Thashagh-etheń, thou wert running.
3. Thashagh-ethant, they were running.

Obs 1. The suffix ant is often pronounced as if written aist.

Obs 2. Dames gives these as ethání, ethení, etc., using the short vowel a is placed of e. the correct sound appears to be e, yá e majhul slightly slurred.

Examples of the past imperfect :-

Miragh-ethání, I was dying, miragh-ethení, miragh-etha, miragh-ethúní, miragh-ethení, miragh-ethant.

Tharagh-ethání, I was returning, tharagh-ethení, tharagh- etha, tharagh-ethúní, tharagh-ethení, tharagh-ethant

Nindagh-ethání, I was sitting, nindagh-ethení, nindagh-
etha, nindagh-ethúní, nindagh-ethení, nindagh-ethant

Juzagh-ethání, I was walking, juzagh-ethení, juzagh-etha;
juzagh-ethúní, juzagh-ethení, juzagh-ethant.

Rasagh-ethání, I was arriving, rasagh-ethení, rasagh-etha ;
rasagh-ethúní, rasagh-ethení, rasagh-ethant.

108. The past participle which forms the base of all the perfect tenses can in several verbs to readily got by adding the suffixes tha, th, or ta to the root eg., tharagh, to return root, thar, past participle, thar-tha, bhorenagh, to break root, boren, past participle bhoren-tha, bresagh, to spin root, bres, past participle, brestha, khashagh, to draw root, khash, past participle, hashta.

109. In many instances, however, some minor changes take place before these suffixes can be added to the root eg., thashagh, to run, past participle thak<sup>h</sup>-ta, tháshagh, to cause to run, past participle thák<sup>h</sup>ta, bozhagh, to loosen, past participle bok<sup>h</sup>ta, bushagh, to get loose, past participle, buk<sup>h</sup>ta, and many others.

110. There is an adjectival form of the past participle that ends in gh, and it is to this form that the verbal endings án, en etc., are added. So that in a general way the rule for the formation of the perfect tenses comes to be “the past participle plus gh plus the verbal suffixes denoting the persons". The 3rd person singular of the present perfect tense may be, and usually is, the simple past participle.

The present perfect.

Thakhtagh-án, I have run, etc.

Singular

1. Thakhtagh-án, I have run, I have galloped
2. Thakhtagh-en, thou hast run.
3. Thakhta, he has run.

Plural

1. Thakhtagh-ún, we have run.
2. Thakhtagh-en, you have run.
3. Thakhtagh-ant, they have run.

111. There are two other forms which are heard used in the 3rd person plural of this tense, Thakhtagh-án and Thakhtagh-ant. The first is the same as the 1st person singular, and is in general use, while the second is less frequently heard.

Examples of the present perfect----

Murthagh-án, I have died, murthagh-en, murtha, murthagh-ún, murthagh-en, murthagh-ant

Tharthagh-án, I have returned, tharthagh-en, tharthagh-ún, thartha, tharthagh-en, tharthagh-ant.

Nishtagh-án, I have sat, nishtagh-en, nishta, nishtagh-ún, nishtagh-en, nishtagh-ant

Juzithagh-án, I have walked, juzithagh-en, juzitha, juzithagh-ún, juzithagh-en, juzithagh-ant.

Rasithagha-án, I have arrived, rasithagh-en, Rasitha, rasithagh-ún, rasithagha-en, rasithagh-ant.

112. The past perfect tense is made up of the past participle of any verb and the past imperfect of the substantive verb. It is not often heard, it is long stiff, and in some instances even difficult to pronounce.

The past perfect

Thakhtagh-ethán, I had run, etc

Singular

1. Thakhtagh-ethán, I had run, I had galloped.
2. Thakhtagh-ethen, thou hadst run.
3. Thakhtagh-etha, he had run.

Plural

1. Thakhtagh-ethún, we had run.
2. Thakhtagh-ethen, you had run.
3. Thakhtagh-ethant, they had run.

113. An alternative form of the 3rd person plural ends in ethán. These alternative form are oftener heard used with some verbs than with others.

Examples of the past perfect---

Murthagh-ethán, I had died, murthagh-ethen, murthagh-etha, murthagh-ethún, murthagh-ethen, murthagh-ethant

Tharthagh-ethán, I had returned, tharthagh-ethen, tharthagh-ethún, tharthagh-etha, tharthagh-ethen, tharthagh-ethant.

Nishtagh-ethán, I had sat, nishtagh-ethen, nishtagh-etha, nishtagh-ethún, nishtagh-ethen, nishtagh-ethant

Juzithagh-ethán, I had walked, juzithagh-ethen, juzithagh-etha, juzithagh-ethún, juzithagh-ethen, juzithagh-ethant.

Rasithagha-ethán, I had arrived, rasithagh-ethen, rasithagh-etha, rasithagh-ethún, rasithagha-ethen, rasithagh-ethant.

114. The contingent perfect tense is found in no less than four different forms, with at least that number of English meanings. In its simplest form it is the past participle with final short a discarded. To this shortened form of the participle is first added the verbal ending ath, and then the personal endings, án, en for the singular, and ún, en, ant for the plural eg., thashagh, to run, to gallop, past participle thakhta, shortened form of the past participle thakht, base for the contingent perfect, thakhtagh. And this is also the 3rd person singular of this tense. The remaining forms end in en and enán, thakht-en, thakht-enán, thakht, thakht-en, and thakht-enán, may be and are used in any of the persons singular or plural.

The contingent perfect
Thakhtath-án, had I run, etc

Singular

1. Thakhtath-án, had I run, had I galloped
2. Thakhtath-en, hadst thou run
3. Thakhtath, had he run

Plural

1. Thakhtath-ún, had we run
2. Thakhtath-en, had you run
3. Thakhtath-ant, had they run.

115. It may also mean, according to the context of the sentence, “would that had run,” “I would have run,” “I was in the habit of running”. So that it comes to be a past optative a past habitual, and a past conditional tense.

116. The root or stem of the verb is also the 2nd person singular of the imperative. The 2nd person plural of this tense is got by adding eth to the root. The 3rd persons of the contingent future are also used as imperatives of the 3rd person.

The imperative
Thas, run ye, etc

Singular

1. Wanting
2. Thash, thash-e, run thou
3. Thash-íth, let him run

Plural

1. Wanting
2. Thash-eth, thash-e, run ye
3. Thash-ant, let them run

Examples of the imperative----

Mir, die, mir-eth

Thar, return, thar-eth

Nind, sit, nind-eth

Juz, walk, juz-eth

Ras, arrive. Ras-eth

117. A verbal noun or noun of agency is got by adding the syllable okt to the root of any verb, eg., thashagh, to run, gallop, root, thash, noun of agency, thash-okt, the runner, used adjectively, good at running.

Obs The verbal noun in okh has at times the meaning that would be conveyed by a future participle active eg., raio<sup>kh</sup>, to run, the goner, he who is about to go. Thus we may in Balochí ravok<sup>h</sup> khai en, in Urdú, jáne-wálá hai, both translating the Latin quis iturus est.

118. The infinitives of all verbs can be used substantively, as in Urdú, Hindí, and most other languages eg., drogh bandagh jawá-e-en n-en, it is not good to tell lies.

119. By the addition of short a to this verbal noun, or infinitive, we obtain a ground or “infinitive purpose”, eg., thashagh, to run, thashagh-a, pha thashagh-a, thashagh-a pha, in order to run. The bare infinitive may sometimes denote purpose. A second gerund of adjectival form and signification is got by the addition of long í or ígh, eg., thashagh, to run, thashagh-í, fit to run. The a, í and ígh are genitival suffixes pure and simple, but they cannot be used promiscuously eg., waragh, to drink, eat, pha waragh-a, in order to eat, tha-ra waraghí bí, you will have to eat, waraghígh n-en, it is not fit to eat, eating of not it is. And so in theory with all other infinitives.

120. The present participle of any verb may be got by adding ána to its root, eg., thashagh, to run, root, thash, present participle, thash-ána, running.

Obs Sindhí verbs form their present participle by adding ando, indo, etc, to the stem

121. A conjunctive participle is formed by replacing the final short a of the past participle by o eg., thashagh, to run, past participle, thakhta, ran, conjunctive participle, thakhto, having ran. This participle is in wide use. It is nearly always followed by the present perfect, eg., ma-í phith murtho shutha, my father has died, my father is dead. We may have it followed by the present perfect eg., mál-ar thála thála khutho thir deagh-ant, they divide the loot into different portions and cast lots for them (the-property portions having-made they cast lots). It is never used with the future tenses, ma rav-án gind-án, I shall go and see (I shall go, I shall see), never ma shutho gind-án (I having-gone shall see).

Obs In Sindhí, also one class of conjunctive participle ends in o eg., halanu, to go, root, hal, conjunctive participle, hal-to, having gone.

122. Theoretically, at least, from all past participles three others of adjectival significance can be formed (1) that ending in e eg., zurthagh-e zar-án, stolen money, form zíragh, to lift, past participle zurtha, adjectival form of past participle, zurthagh, (2) that ending in iya or ía eg., dighár-a waptiya, lying on the ground, form wapsagh, to sleep, he down, past participle, wapta, tharthiya, returned, form tharagh, to return, past participle, thartha, (3) that ending in ígha, one of the suffixes of the genitive case. The first two are in wide use, many examples of them have already been given.

Thí bar-e tha-ra nokarí-a khash-án, next time I shall discharge you (next time thee service-from out I shall draw)

Ahmad-á ma-na nokarí-a dar-a khashta, Ahmad has dismissed me (Ahmad-by me service-from out has been drawn)

Aulí wájha pha chi kár na khanagh-en, why don't you work as you used to (formerly as for why work not thou doest)?

Sáin, aulí wájha ma kár khanagh-án, sir, I do work as I used to (sir, formerly as I work am doing).

QUESTIONNAIR

1. Conjugate the substantively verb in the present and past imperfect tenses?
2. Put into Balochí, He was ill; we were ill, both were present?
3. How do you derive the root of a verb? Give examples
4. What tenses are formed from the root or stem of the verb?
5. Give the 1st persons singular, contingent future, of khanagh, to do, ravagh, to go, deagh, to give, reshagh, to sow?
6. Conjugate bandagh, to bind, in the present and past imperfect tenses?
7. Account for the form deagh-ant?
8. How is the past participle formed? Is there any hard and fast rule?
9. Show by examples how nouns of agency are formed.
10. Translate into English, E áf waragh-ígh n-en, Account for the form waragh-ígh?

THE TENSES.

123. In the preceding chapter we have seen how the root or stem of a verb is got from the infinitive, and how this root when got goes to make up the contingent future, absolute future, imperative, present participle, and the noun of agency. We have seen also that the infinitive itself forms the base of the present and past imperfect tenses, and that as a verbal noun subject to inflection it does duty as a gerund. As a further example of these formations. Let us take another verb.

Khanagh, to do.

Verbal noun, Khanagh, doing ; Khanagh-a , for the purpose of doing ; Khanagh-í , obliged to do ; Khanagh-ígh, fit to do, Root, khan.

Imperative, khan. Do thou

Present participle, khan-ána, doing

Noun of agency, khan-okh, the doer

Contingent future, khan-án, I may do.

Absolute future, khan-án, I shall do.

124. Should the infinitive begin with a vowel the contingent future and absolute take the prefixes bí or kh, and the imperative similarly the prefixes ba or bí. These prefixes are euphonic only and form no part of the verb. Among verbs that begin with a vowel are ágh, to come; áragh, to bring; ashkanagh, to hear; ílagh, to abandon; oshtagh, to stand; aksagh, to sleep. All these are in everyday use. Take example ;-

Ágh, to come; root, á

Contingent future, kh-á-án, or simply khán. I may come.

Imperative , be-y-á, or bí-y-á, come thou.

The use of kh as a prefix is generally confined to the two future tenses ; it is less seldom heard with tenses formed from the past participle; kh-ákhta, he came, he has come, and kh-ártha-í, he brought, he has brought, would be exceptional, it not incorrect.

125. If, however, such verbs be used negatively, the prefixes bí or kh of the contingent and absolute future, and ba or bí of the imperative and dispensed with, the negative participle taking their place, e.g.:-

Áragh, to bring; root, ár

Contingent future, affirmative, be-y-ár-án, I may bring Contingent future, negative, ne-y-ár-án, I may not bring.

Absolute future, affirmative, be-y-ár-án, I shall bring.

Absolute future, negative, ne-y-ár-án, I shall not bring.

Imperative, affirmative, be-y-ár, bring thou.

Imperative, negative, ma-y-ár, do not bring.

Ilagh, to leave, íl

Contingent future, affirmative, b-íl-án, I may leave.

Contingent future, negative, ne-l-án, I may not leave.

Absolute future, affirmative, b-íl-án, I shall leave.

Absolute future, negative, ne-l-án, I shall not leave.

Imperative, affirmative, b-íl, go thou.

Imperative, negative, m'-íl, do not let go.

Ágh, to come; root, á,

Contingent future, 3rd person singular, used affirmatively, kh-á-íth, he may come.

Contingent future, 3rd person singular, used negatively, ne-y-á-íth, he may not come.

Obs 1. In the above examples the letter y is euphonic; it is an infix to help out the sound of the following vowel, and forms no part of the base.

Obs 2. For the same tenses bí and ba may become be or b', and ma, me or m'.

Obs 3. When the root of a verb begins with a vowel, as in the case of ma, are dropped, and the remaining consonant considers with the initial vowel of the root; e.g., b-íl, let go, is sounded as if written bíl. In the case of m'-íl, do not let go, there remains a slight trace of the negative vowel a short breathing; it is not pronounced míl.

126. With the contingent and absolute future of ilagh, to leave, the prefix bí is preferred ; with other verbs beginning with a vowel the prefix kh. But much appears to depend on the tribe and on the locality.

127. Following the analogy of those that begin with a vowel, a few verbs, transitive and intransitive, that begin with a consonant take the prefix ba or bí in the imperative, e.g.,:-

Ravagh, to go ; root, rau.

Imperative, ba-rau, go thou.

Wafsagh, to sleep ; root wafs.

Imperative, bí-wafs, go to sleep.

Waragh, to eat ; root, war.

Imperative, ba-war, or simply bor, eat thou.

Giragh, to take ; root, gír.

Imperative, ba-gír, take thou.

128. The generality of verbs whose roots end in the letter r, preceded by a short vowel, lengthen that vowel into its corresponding long in the 3rd person singular of the contingent future, e.g.:-

Waragh, to eat ; root, war.

Contingent future, 3rd person singular, wárth, he may eat.

Baragh, to take away ; root, bar.

Contingent future, 3rd person singular, bárth, he may take away.

Giragh, to take ; root, gír

Contingent future, 3rd person singular, girth, he may take.

Obs. This lengthening of a vowel in the 3rd person singular of the contingent future is traceable to classical Persian; kanád, would that he may dig, from kandan, to dig.

129. This termination th is a shortened form of the regular ending íth (103-104). It is sometimes suppressed altogether, leaving the above forms wár, bár, and gír.

130. The verb deagh, to give, has dáth, in the 3rd person singular of the contingent future, and dá in the absolute future; rawagh, to go, has rauth and rau respectively. The verb ilagh, to leave, to let go, has kh-il-í in the 3rd person singular of both futures. But kh-í-íth is heard, the transitive verbs khanagh to do, and janagh, to strike, have khat and khanth, jath and janth in the 3rd persons singular of the contingent future.

Obs 1. The reason of this confusion will be readily understood when it is remembered that verbal ending í is a softened form of íth.

Obs 2. The 3rd person singular of the contingent future will nearly always be found to end th, íth, or in íth, and the absolute future in í.

Obs 3. It is not unlikely that at one time the contingent future as we have it now was the actual present imperfect.

Obs 4. In both Sindhi and Pakkto there is a habitual aorist tense, and traces of it in the Persian.

Obs 5. The personal terminations of the Balochí future tenses closely resemble those of the Pakkto absolute future; am, e, í ; ú, aí, í

Obs 6. In modern Persian the present tense is freely used for the absolute future, which appears to be becoming absolute.

Obs 7. In like manner we often find a Persian contingent future used where we might with equal propriety expect a present imperfect.

131. The contingent future differs widely from absolute future in that it denotes possibility, probability, doubt, stipulation, condition, habit. The absolute future denotes future action only.

132. The present participle may be used of past, present, or future time ;e.g, raptagh-ant gush-ána, they went on singing; rav-ant gush-ána, they will go on singing. It is always formed in the same way; by the addition of ána to the base.

133. The noun of the agency will generally be found to have an adjectival force, as in Urdú and Hindi. For instance, deokh, a giver, may also mean a person who is in the the habit of giving, a generous individual ; hence maghan-deokh, a liberal person, a person in the habit of giving away bread. Similarly, from thashagh, to run, we get thashokh, a runner, a man addicted to or good at running. These form a large and a useful class, easily derived and easily remembered.

134. The present imperfect tense denotes an action unfinished at the present time, but in progress ; the past imperfect an action unfinished at some past time, but in progress at that time. E.g., thau kadaha ma-na sidhá phasav na deagh-én, you never give me a direct reply, a direct reply ; logh-a ravagh-ethán ki dag-a ma-na haur-á giptá, I was going home when I was overtaken by rain on the way.

135. The present imperfect tense denotes an action unfinished at the present time, and the past perfect an action completed at the same past time ; e.g., ba-rau, pholkhan Mohan tharthá, go and see if Mohan has returned; doshi na tharthagh-etha, he had not returned last night.

136. Past participles end in tha, thá or ia. The first class in the most numerous, probably comprising two-thirds of all the verbs in the language. It included all verbs whose bases or stems end in a vowel, most of those that end in a mute, in the lettern, and also all causals, e.g., ;-

Biagh, to be : root, bi ; past participle, bi-thá.

Siagh, to swell : root ; si ; past participle, si-thá.

Gregh, to weep : root gre ; past participle, gre-thá.

Dhikkagh, to low : root dhikk : past participle, dhikk-e-thá.

Garragh, to roar : root garr ; past participle garr-e-thá.

Bashkagh, to bestow : root bashk ; past participle, bashk-e-thá.

Poshenagh, to clothe: root poshen ; past participle, poshen-thá.

Risinagh, to draw away a sword: root risin : past participle risin-thá.

Phirenagh, to throw away: root, phiren ; past participle, phiren-thá.

Oshtdainagh, to set up : root, oshtdain ; past participle, oshtdain-thá.

Rishainagh, to pour out : root, rishain; past participle rishain-thá.

Khushainagh, to have killed : root, khushain ; past participle, khushain-tha.

137. Derivatives from Persian verbs ending in idan generally end in tha, and generally insert the short vowel í before it, e.g., larzagh, to tremble : root larz; past participle, larz-í-tha.

Rasagh, to arrive : root, ras ; past participle, ras-í-tha.

Khandagh, to laugh : root, khand ; past participle, khand-i-tha.

138. These past participles that end in tha and ta are generally irregular. The participial endings are added direct to the stem without either of the infixes e or í. In some the basic vowel is changed ; sh and zh become kh ; f becomes p ; and dh and z are replaced by s, e.g.,-

Thosagh, to extinguish: root, thos : past participle : thos-tha.

Thusagh, to faint; root thus : past participle ; thus-tha.

Zánagh, to know; root zán : past participle ; zán-tha.

Baragh, to take away : root, bar ; past participle, bur-tha.

Dozhagh, to milk : root dosh : past participle, dush-tha.

Ziragh, to raise, root, zir : past participle. Zur-tha.

Bozhagh, to open, root, bozh : past participle, bokh-tha.

Gezhagh, to bring forth: root, gezh : past participle gikh-ta.

Mizhagh, to make water : root, mizh : past participle, mizh-ta.

Shwashkagh, to sell; root, shwashk : past participle, shwakh-ta.

Soshagh, to burn ; root, sosh : past participle, sokh-ta.

Thasagh, to run; root, thash ; past participle, thakh-ta.

Gwáfagh, to summon; root, gwáf, past participle, gwáp-ta.

Wafsagh, to sleep; root, wafs; past participle, wap-ta.

Rudhagh, to grow; root, rudh : past participle, rus-tha.

Radhagh, to tear up : root, radh; past participle, ras-tha.

Shudhagh, to hunger; root, shudh; past participle, shus-tha.

Guzagh, to pass : root, guz, past participle, gwash-ta.

Kizagh, to allow : root, kiz ; past participle, kish-ta.

Most, if not all, the other irregular past participles are given in the excercises.

Obs 1. The past participle of intransitive verbs is a example preterite, that of transitive verbs a preterite with a passive signification.

Obs 2. In Sindhi a number of past participles end tho, others in to, corresponding to the tha, tha and ta of the Balochí (Cf, tho, tha, then).

139. The contingent perfect will generally be found to convey a condition, a wish, a regret, or a habit, with regard to be an action that has already taken place. The following examples of conditional sentences are taken from the textbooks, with slight alterations.

The present imperfect of the substantive verb followed by the present imperfect :-

Mard ham-esh ení ní má-r manzúr ení, if this be the man, we accept him (the-man even-this is, then us-to approved he is).

The contingent future followed by the present imperfect :-

Ma ki tha-ra hál-a de-án, tha-ra chi taufik asteń, if, I were to tell you, what will you be able to do (I if thee-to the-circumstances should-give, thee-to what power is)?

The contingent future followed by the contingent future:-

Ki charh-eñ nind-eñ sadh koh pand-a yá jhat nánwán bál girth rau, were you to mount and sit on it, it would fly away with you a hundred miles in a minute (if you should-mount (and) should-sit a-hundred kos journey one moment in wing it-would take (and) would-go). There are four contingent future in this sentences : charh-eñ and nind-eñ in the protasis and girth and rau in the apodosis. Note the absence of the conjunctive participle.

The contingent future followed by the absolute future :-
Dwázdah ki do rau guda chikar sar-kh-á-í, if two be taken from twelve, how many will remain (twelve if two should-go then how many will-remain)? Dawázdah is in the ablative the preposition azh etc., being understood. For explanation of the form kh-á-í see the absolute future in the next chapter : ágh, to come : sar-ágh, to remain over.

The absolute future.

Kh-á-án, I shall come

Singular

1. Kh-á-án, I shall come.
2. Kh-á-eñ, thou wilt come.
3. Kh-á-í, he will come

Plural

1. Kh-á-ún, we shall come.
2. Kh-á-eñ, you will come.
3. Kh-á-y-ant, they will come.

142. These two tenses may be conjugated throughout with the help of the prefix be, that is bi : e.g., be-y-án, be-y-á-en, be-y-á-íth and be-y-á-í; be-y-á-ún, be-y-á-eñ or be-y-á-eth, be-y-á-y-ant; and negatively with ne, that is na : e.g., ne-y-án. I may not come, etc., with the contingent future the prefix kh is preferred in other is heard oftenest.

The present imperfect
Man-ágh-án, I am coming.

Singular

1. Man-ágh-án, I am coming.
2. Man-ágh-en, thou art coming.
3. Man-ágh-e, he is coming.

Plural

1. Man-ágh-ún, we are coming.
2. Man-ágh-en, you are coming.
3. Man-ágh-ant, they are coming.

143. With the prefix phedh the conjugation is equally simple: phedh-ágh-án, phedh-ágh-en, phedh-ágh-e, phedh-ágh-ún; phedh-ágh-en, phedh-ágh-ant, or phedh-ágh-án.

The present imperfect
Man-ágh-ethán, I was coming.

Singular

1. Man-ágh-ethán, I was coming.
2. Man-ágh-ethen, thou wert coming.
3. Man-ágh-etha, he was coming.

Plural

1. Man-ágh-ethún, we were coming.
2. Man-ágh-ethen, you are coming.

3. Man-ágh-ethant, Mana-ágh-ethán, they were coming.

144. If the prefix phedh be used, the verb will become ; phedh-ágh-ethán, phedh-ágh-etheén, phedh-ágh-etha, phedh-ágh-ethún, phedh-ágh-etheén, , phedh-ágh-ethant, or , phedh-ágh-ethán.

Obs as the second form of the 3rd person plural of the present imperfect tenses is the same as the 1st person singular, care must be exercised when making a written translation against any chance of ambiguity ; ant is always a safe indication of the 3rd person plural ;-

The present perfect

Ákhtagh-án, I have come.

Singular

1. Ákhtagh-án, I have come.
2. Ákhtagh-eén, thou hast come.
3. Ákhta, he has come.

Plural

1. Ákhtagh-ún, we have come.
2. Ákhtagh-eén, you have come.
3. Ákhtagh-ant or Ákhtagh-án, they have come.

145. There is an alteration form of the past participle pf this verb, viz, átka. It is conjugated in exactly the same way as the more commonly used ákhta; e.g., Ákhtagh-án, Ákhtagh-eén, Ákhtagh-ún, Ákhtagh-eén, Ákhtagh-ant, or Ákhtagh-án. In the 3rd person plural there is still another form; ákht-ánt, they came, they have come.

The past perfect.

Ákhtagh-ethán, I had come.

Singular

1. Ákhtagh-ethán, I had come.
2. Ákhtagh-ethán, thou hadst come.
3. Ákhtagh-etha, he had come.

Plural

2. Ákhtagh-ethún, we had come.
3. Ákhtagh-ethen, you had come.
4. Ákhtagh-ethant or Ákhtagh-ethán, they had come.

147. Or, when conjugated with the second form of the past participle; Ákhtagh-ethán, Ákhtagh-ethen, Ákhtagh-etha : Ákhtagh-ethún, Ákhtagh-ethen, Ákhtagh-ethant or Ákhtagh-ethán.

The contingent perfect.

Ákhtath-án, had I come, etc.

Singular

1. Ákhtath-án, had I come, etc.
2. Ákhtath-en, hadst thou come, etc.
3. Ákhtath, had he come, etc.

Plural

1. Ákhtath-ún, had we come, etc.
2. Ákhtath-en, had you come, etc.
3. Ákhtath-ant, had they come, etc.

147. Of this tense the forms in most general use are Ákhtath-en, be-y-ákht-en and ákht-enán, had I come, would that I had come, in all the persons singular and plural ; kh-ákhtath or kh-átht, I used to come, thou usedest to come, etc.

(8)

The imperative
Be-y-á, come thou.

Singular

1. Wanting.
2. Be-y-á, come thou.
3. Be-y-á-íth, let him come.

Plural

1. Wanting.
2. Be-y-á-eth, come ye.
3. Be-y-á-y-ant, let them come.

148. Or, When used negatively : me-y-á, me-y-á-íth ; me-y-á-eth, me-á-y-ant.

Obs 1. These forms should not be drawn out and sounded syllable by syllable, but quickly : meyáíth, meyá, meyáeth, meyáyant. The negative itself is ma, but when used as a prefix its sounded becomes nearly that of the English word, "may".

Obs 2. There is a familiar homely form which is often heard, be-y-á-the, come here. It is from be-y-á-edha.

149. Besides ákhta, átka, came, the other participles in use are ákhtígha, coming, and ákhta, átka or ákto, having come. The noun of agency is dokh, the comer, one who comes.

CAUSAL VERBS.

150. From most intransitive verbs, and from a few intransitives also, a causal or second transitive verb can be formed. The broad meaning of the causals is : action by other. These are generally formed by inserting the infix ain immediately after the root of the original verb: e.g., infinitive gardagh, to return; root : gard; root for causal, gard-ain; infinitive for causal, gardainagh, to cause to return, khushagh, to kill; root, khush; root for causal, khush-ain; infinitive for causal, khushainagh, to cause to kill, to have killed.

151. A second method of forming causals is by lengthening the root vowel of original verbs ; e.g., thashagh, to run; root thash; root for causal, thásh; infinitive for causal, tháshagh, to cause to run; thashgh, to faint; root, thus; root for causal, thos; infinitive for causal, thosagh, to cause to faint, to stun.

152. A smaller class in addition to lengthening the stem vowel take the infix en or ain : e.g., bhuragh, to be broken; root, bhur; root for causal, bhor-en : infinitive for causal, bhorenagh, to break, thigh, to be built; root, thaí; root for causal, thá-ain; infinitive for causal, tháainagh, to build.

153. Some verbs do not conform to any known rule in forming their causals; e.g., oshtagh, to stand, oshtalainagh, to set up; nindagh, to sit, nindagh, to sit, neádhagh, to cause to sit, to seat, and nishtainagh, to lay or spread out.

Obs 1. The rules for the formation of causals in Balochí closely follow those that obtain in Sindhi, Panjabi, Urdú, etc. In Sindhi, for instance, dasanu, to show, makes das-áínu, to cause to show; phíranu, to turn. Pheranu, to cause to turn.

Obs 2. In Persian verbs are formed by adding the termination ánídan or ándan, to the formative or stem of the primitive verb; jastan, to leap; root, jah; causal, jah-ánídan, to cause to leap.

Ma zí shikár-a shuthagh-án, I went out shooting yesterday (I yesterday shooting-for went).

Nermosh-e thun bithagh-án sakhía, I became very thirsty at mid-day (mid-day at thirsty I became very).

Odha cháth ne-y-ath, áf ne-y-ath, there was not well there and no water (there well not was, water was not). We might insert dí after cháth and again after áf.

Má daryá phalawa sar-gipta, I set out for the river (me-by the river-of the-direction was taken). Sar-giragh, to set out.

Juz-ána juz-ána begahá daryá nemgha rasithagh-án, I kept journeying on and arrived at the river in the evening (going (and) going the-evening-in the-river at I arrived).

Daryá dar-khapta, the river was in flood (the river out-was-fallen). By here using the present perfect tense, and later the present imperfect, the narrator brings the scene more vividly into view.

Áf gandagh eń, sor-e eń, waragh-íth n-eń, the water was bad brackish and unfit to drink (the-water bad is, salt is, fit-to-drink not is).

Chi khan-án, thuní-a mir-án ki sor-e áf waragh-a mir-án, what was I to do? Die of thirst or die from drinking brackish water (what may I do? Thirst-from may I die or salt water drinking-from may I die)? Thus he is supposed to have thought.

Guda má áf wártha, chi-e chi-e, then I drank the water; just a little (then me-by the-water was drunk, some, some).

Áf wártha guda mirenta dil janagh-a, I had no sooner drank than I began to retch. Mirenta dil janagha, I began to retch, is an example of an inceptive compound.

Láf dor di bitha, I had belly-ache (belly pain also became).

Dil shutha sakhía, I vomited a great deal (heart went exceedingly). Note these useful verbs and how they are used: dil janagh, to retch; dil ravagh, to vomit; láf ravagh, to void or discharge from the bowels.

Jhate-a phadhá láf di sakhíá shutha, after a little violent dysentery also set in (little after stomach also violently went).

Thi bar-e shikár khanagh-a pha nawání ná rav-eń, probably you won't go hunting again (another time hunting for perhaps not you may go).

Thau hachi jatha, have you shot anything (thee-by anything has been hit).

Síwá kharde kharde khargoshk má hachi na ditha, except a few hares I saw nothing (except few few hares me-by anything not was seen).

Ma-na tha-í sar eń thí bar-e shikár-a na rav-ání, I vow I shall not go shooting again (me-to thee-of the-head is a-second time shooting-for not I will go).

Wath-í logh-a ba-rau, chi-e darmá khan-eth, go home and take some medicine (yourself-of the-house-to go, some deicine make).

Logh-a rav-ání darmán-a khan-ání, I shall go home and take some medicine (house-to I shall go, medicine I shall make). The Balochí idiom is "to make medicine".

QUESTIONNAIRE

1. How far is the verb ágh, to come, defective?
2. What prefixes are used with the two futures of this verb, and what with the two imperfects?
3. Explain and give the English meaning of; Biye, ákhtant, beyáthe.
4. How much of the original verb remains in khání, I shall come? Has this word any other meaning?
5. Give the composition of the prefixes man and phadh.
6. Explain the composition and give the meaning of; áokh, átko, khákht, meyáíth, meyá.
7. How are causal verbs formed? Give examples.
8. Give the infinitives of the past participles: bokhta, gipta, shutha, ártha, bitha.
9. Put into Balochí: they set out in the direction of home.
10. Translate into Balochí: I swear that I shall not steal again.

THE TRANSITIVE VERB

154. The transitive verb khanagh, to do, to make, makes khat or khanth in the 3rd person singular of the contingent future and khand or khanant in the 3rd person plural. But these forms are often used promiscuously. The past participle is khutha. In other respects the conjugation of this verb is regular.

(1)

The contingent future

Khan-ání, I may do.

Singular

1. Khan-ání, I may do.
2. Khan-eń, thou mayest do.
3. Khat, he may do.

Plural

1. Khan-úń, we may do.
2. Khan-eth, you may do.
3. Khant, they may do.

(2)

The absolute future

Khan-ání, I shall do.

Singular

1. Khan-ání, I shall do.
2. Khan-eń, thou wilt do.
3. Khan-í, he will do.

Plural

1. Khan-úń, we shall do.
2. Khan-eth, you will do.
3. Khan-ant, they will do.

Obs. In the 2nd persons plural the form khan-eń, you may do, you will do, is also in use.

(3)

The present imperfect
Khanagh-áín, I am doing

Singular

1. Khanagh-áín, I am doing.
2. Khanagh-eín, thou art doing.
3. Khanagh-e, he is doing.

Plural

1. Khanagh-úín, we are doing.
2. Khanagh-eín, you are doing.
3. Khanagh-ant, they are doing.

Obs 1. There is at times a slight differences observable between the sound of eín in the 2nd person singular and eín in the 2nd person plural. In the singular the sound inclines towards ai and in the plural towards de.

Obs 2. In nearly all tenses of all verbs where this ending prevails, this distinction is noticeable.

The past imperfect.
Khanagh-etháín, I was doing.

Singular

1. Khanagh-etháín, I was doing.
2. Khanagh-etheín, thou wert doing.
3. Khanagh-etha, he was doing.

Plural

1. Khanagh-ethúín, we were doing.
2. Khanagh-etheín, you were doing.
3. Khanagh-ethant, they were doing.

155. In the case of the present perfect tense only the 3rd persons are in use. If the object be singular, the participle will be singular, if the object be plural, the participle will be in the plural : e.g., má zahim árthha, I brought the sword, I have brought the sword; má zahm-án árthagh-ant, I brought the swords, I have brought the swords. The verb now agrees with the object, not with the subject. Why? For the reason that má is not the nominative case but the agentive: it no longer means “I” but “by me”. And so in every instances of every transitive in this tense. The English reading of the above sentence is : by me the sword has been brought; by me the swords have been brought. This illustration makes the necessity for the verb agreeing with its object very plain. The construction has become passive.

156. When this construction is used—and it must always be used in the case of the present perfect tense of transitive verbs – the object may be left uninflected, that is, without a suffix. It sometimes happens, however, that for greater emphasis or for some other reason the object has be particularized and given one of the suffixes found with accusative case, a, ar, ára, ra (17). When such a contingency arises any one of the three suffixes ar, ára, ra may be used, but not, a. The reason for this ruling is obvious: to avoid ambiguity. The suffix a is not infrequently pronounced á, or so nearly á as to leave it doubtful which is the agent and which the object; e.g., in the sentence wazír-á án mard jathha, the minister struck that man, the meaning is perfectly clear as to the striker and the struck; but in wazír-á án mard-a jathha, we are left guessing as to who struck whom. The remedy is, the rule is, use mard-ar, etc.

Obs 1. The participle is often found in the singular even when the object is plural. This is especially so when the object, the accusative case, is followed by one of the suffixes. But this practice is not for imitation by the student.

Obs 2. The whole scheme of using the agentive with the present perfect tense, and of giving it a passive signification, will be found in the Hindi, Urdú, etc.

(5)

The present perfect
Má khutha, I have done.

Singular

1. Má khutha, I have done.
2. Thau khutha, thou hast done.
3. Án-hía khutha, he has done.

Plural

1. Má khutha, we have done.
2. Sháw khutha, you have done.
3. Án-hán khutha, they have done.

157. With a plural object khuthagh-ant, takes the place of khutha in all the persons. There is no other difference observed. If the pronominals be used we get; khuth-úń, or khuth-en, I have done, done by me; khuth-e, thou art hast done, done by thee; khutha-í, he has done, done by him; khutha-ish, they have done, done by them.

Obs 1. For the plural khuthagh-ant, we sometimes hear shortened form khuthant. And so of other verb.

Obs 2. Chiefly on the analogy of the Persian we sometimes hear khutham, done by me; khuthain, done by us; ditham; seen by me, ditham, seen by us; khushtam, killed by me, khushtam, killed by us. But these are of infrequent use, and may be left to the Baloch.

The past perfect.

Khuthagh-ethán, I had done.

Singular

1. Khuthagh-ethán, I had done.
2. Khuthagh-ethén, thou hadst done.
3. Khuthagh-etha, he had done.

Plural

1. Khuthagh-ethún, we had done.
2. Khuthagh-ethén, thou hadst done.
3. Khuthagh-ethant, they had done.

(7)

The contingent perfect

Khuthath-án, had I done, etc.

Singular

1. Khuthath-án, had I done, etc.
2. Khuthath-en, hadst thou done, etc.
3. Khuthatha, had he done, etc.

Plural

1. Khuthath-ún, had we done, etc.
2. Khuthath-en, had you done, etc.
3. Khuthath-ant, had they done, etc.

158. Or, we may use khuth, khuth-en, khuth-enán, had I done, would that I had done, in all the persons singular and plural.

The imperative
Khań, do thou

Singular

1. Wanting.
2. Khań, do thou
3. Wanting.

Plural

1. Wanting.
2. Khan-eth, do ye.
3. Wanting.

Obs 1. In khan, do thou, the n is often made nasal, khań. This change is made in imitation of the Pakkhto imperative, which ends in áń in the singular.

Obs 2. We also hear khan-e, do thou. This ending e is used with many verbs, both transitive and intransitive.

Obs 3. This would appear to be in imitation of the Sindhi transitive verb; jhal-e, seize, phur-e, plunder.

Obs 4. So closeos the resemblance between the two languages in this respect that we sometimes actually meet with the same imperatives: Balochi, deagh, to give, imperative, de: Sindhi, dianu, to give, imperative, de. True, the pronunciation is not quite same.

Obs 5. That given as the imperative of the 3rd persons is no imperative at all. It is the contingent future need in a preactive or exhortative sense. When preceded by the negative ma the signification will usually be found to be "lest", etc.

Obs 6. In Pakkhto the imperative of the 2nd person plural ends in ai, a sound closely resembling that of e, in de, give gre, weep, etc.

Obs 7. The Balochi prefix be (bi) of the imperative is the Persian ba, bu, bi and the Pakkhto wo, wu, to. Neither in Pakkhto nor Balochi is the prefix and negative used together. In Persian the prefix is in more general use than in Balochi.

Infinitive, khanagh, to do, doing.

First gerund, or infinitive or purpose. Khanagh-a, in order to do

Second gerund, khanagh-í or khanagh-ígh, fit to be done, etc.

First present participle, khan-ána, doing (active)

Second present participle, khuthiya, khuth-ígha, doing (passive)

Past participle, khutha, done

Past participle, adjectival form, khuthagh-e, done

Conjunctive participle, khutho, having done

Noun of agency, khan-okh, the doer.

Obs. The gerund in í is on the model of the Persian: kundan, to dig, kandan-í, fit to be dug, khwardan, to eat, khwardun-í, fit to be eaten.

158a. The correct use of the present perfect tense of transitive verbs and of pronominals with transitive and intransitive form the basis of all that can be called grammatical Balochi. Other rules are of minor importance, and will generally be found obscured by numerous exceptions.

Some further examples of the pronominals :-

Úń, by me                      Bale, túfak gipto ártħ-unń, yes, I have brought the rifles (yes, the rifles having-been-taken have been brought-by-me).

E, by you                      Phol khutha-í pha chi khandith-e, he asked them why they had laughed (enquiry was made-by-him for why have you laughed). Khandagh is here treated as a transitive verb, which it often is. E is in the agentive case and means “by them”.

Í, he Duráh na bitha-í, he did not recover (well not became-he).

Í, his Haw-e kár en-í, thi kár n-en-í, this was what he did, he did nothing else (this work is-his other work not is-his) for the sake of vividness a past event is here rendered by the present imperfect. In each clause the verb has lost its nasal í before the pronominal í.

Í, to him Bachh ne-y-ath-í, he had no son (son not was to-him). This is called the dative of possession.

Í, him Zál-á jathagh-ant-í lath, the woman gave him the stick (the-woman-by were struck-him the-stick). That she gave him sundry blows is denoted by the plural jathagh-ant.

Í, by him Dár-e jorentho ándi zál-e but tháíntha-í, he joined a piece of wood and fashioned it into the shape of a woman's body (piece of wood having-fashioned into a human being a-woman-of the-body was made-by-him).

Ish, they Go wath-í nacho-a shuthagh-ant-ish, they went to their uncle (to their uncle went-they)

Ish, their Rand astathant-ish, there were their traces (traces were-their).

Ish , to them	Zar de-án-ish , I will give them the money (the-money I will give-to-them).
Ish , them	Bar-ish , take them away (take away-them).
Ish , by them	Ma-na gwar thau shwakhta-ish , they have sold me to you (I (me) to thee have been sold-by-them). Ma-na , me. When the object is in the accusative a literal translation into English is next to impossible.
Í , it	Dar-a khash be-y-ár-í , darg it outside (outside drag, bring it).
Í , its	Jawáne chi en-í , what is its good quality (good quality what is-its)?
Í , her	Be-y-á, tha-ra phedárán-í , come along, I will show her to you (come, thee-to I will show-her).
Í , her	Nám en-í naina báí , her name is Niana Báí (name is-her Naina Báí).
Í , by her	Gwashta-í tholagh-ár . . . . she said to the jackal. . . (it was said-by-her the-jackal-to. ..).

159. It is often difficult to show the presence of the pronomials when translating into literal English: e.g., haw-án sweth-e phut ki thau khashta-í . . . . that white hair which you have plucked out. . . . . thau ma jher, thau di siyáh-e-í phut gir, do not wrangle you also pluck out a black one. Nor is the need of their presence at all times apparent : e.g., na tha-í láf din-án-í, otherwise I will rip open thy belly.

160. The verb phadeagh, phadátha, to ran, run away, is always treated as a transitive; gwáragh, to rain, sometimes as a transitive and sometimes as an intransitive, but generally the former, Gregh, gretha, to weep; chishagh, chishetha, to sneeze; bhawnkagh, bhaunkitha, to bark as a dog; kurainagh, kuraintha, to howl as a jackal, and a few others, are sometimes treated as transitives and take the agentive case before the present tense.

Obs 1. Many neuter verbs are used in a transitive sense in Sindhi: khilanu, to laugh; mún khílío, I laughed, but literally, by me it was laughed.

Obs 2. And also in Pakkhto: khandal, to laugh; zharal, to lament. Dangal, to jump, and many others are considered and treated as transitives.

Obs 3. In Persian also there are a few verbs that are both transitive and intransitive. In short, these three languages have much in common.

6. Distinguish between the use of má khutha and má khuthagh-ant.
7. Explain the words khuthant, khushtom, giptún, khuthath.
8. Give a list of all the pronominals in use.
9. Put into Balochí, using the pronominals : he went; he became ill ; they went to their father.
10. Translate into English: war-ish, ham-edha ne-yár-í; nám en-í Mohan; tha-ra de-an-í; bar-í; bar-ish; bor-ish.

THE PASSIVE VOICE.

161. Theoretically, all transitive verbs have a passive voice. Actually, however, the passive voice is very seldom heard. There is not the same need of a passive voice in Balochi as there is in English. Balochi has a number of neuter or intransitive verbs, and, as will have been seen, certain tense formed from the past participles of transitive verbs that have a distinctly passive signification.

162. The passive infinitive, like the active, ends in agh. It is stem or base of the active verb followed by í followed by jagh; e.g., active infinitive, janagh, to strike; root, jan; passive infinitive. Jan-í-jagh, to be struck; active infinitive, khushagh, to kill; root, khush; passive infinitive. Khush-í-jagh, to be killed: active infinitive, giregh, to seize; root, gir; passive infinitive. Gir-í-jagh, to be seized; active infinitive, bandagh, to fasten; root, band; passive infinitive, band-í-jagh, to be fastened; active infinitive, baragh, to take away; root, bar; passive infinitive, bar-í-jagh, to be taken away; active infinitive, dinagh, to tear; root, di, passive infinitive, din-í-jagh, to be torn; active infinitive, soshagh, to burn; root sosh; passive infinitive, sosh-í-jagh, to be burnt.

Obs 1. The termination ijagh is a survival of the old Prakrit passive in ijja.

Obs 2. This method of forming the passive voice is borrowed from Sindhi; e.g., púranu, to bury, púr-janu, to be buried.

Obs 3. Sindhi, Panjabi and Balochi are the only modern Prakrit that can be said to possess a passive voice.

163. The base of this new infinitive is got in the usual way, by dropping the infinitive ending agh; e.g., infinitive janájagh, to be struck; root janij; infinitive, khushijagh, to be killed, root, khushij; infinitive, girijagh, to be seized; root, girij; and so on.

164. If to this new base be added the verbal endings án, eń, ítĥ, í, for the singular, and ún, eń, ant, for the plural, we get the two future tenses of the passive voice; e.g., janij-án, I may be struck; khushij-án, I may be killed; girij-án, I may be seized. And so with any other verb. The distinction between the use of ítĥ and í in the 3rd persons singular is not always observed.

The contingent future
janij-án, I may be struck.

Singular

1. janij-án, I may be struck.
2. janij-eń, thou mayest be struck.
3. janij-ítĥ, he may be struck.

Plural

1. janij-ún, we may be struck.
2. janij-eń, thou mayest be struck.
3. janij-ant, they may be struck.

Further examples :-

Khushij-án, I may be killed.

Girij-án, I may be caught.

Bundij-án, I may be bound.

Barij-án, I may be carried away.

Dinij-án, I may be torn.

Soshij-án, I may be burnt.

The absolute future
janij-án, I shall be struck.

Singular

1. janij-án, I shall be struck.
2. janij-eń, thou wilt be struck.
3. janij-í, he will be struck

plural

1. janij-ún, we shall be struck.
2. janij-eń, you will be struck.
3. janij-ant, they will be struck.

Further examples:-

Khushij-án, I shall be killed.

Girij-án, I shall be caught.

Bundij-án, I shall be bound.

Barij-án, I shall be carried away.

Dinij-án, I shall be torn.

Soshij-án, I shall be burnt.

165. We have already seen that the past participle of the active voice has a passive signification (155, 156). This fact has to be borne in mind when considering the passive present imperfect tense; e.g., jathagh, struck; jathagh-án, I am struck; khushtagh, killed; khushtagh-án, I am killed, etc. there is an alternative form in use, formed from the alternative past participle jathiya, struck, khushtiya, killed etc. ; e.g., jathiy-án, I am struck; khushtiy-án, I am killed.

(3)

The present imperfect
jathagh-án, I am struck.

Singular

1. jathagh-án, I am struck.
2. jathagh-eń, thou art struck.
3. jathagh-e, he is struck.

Plural

1. jathagh-ún, we are struck.
2. jathagh-eń, you are struck.
3. jathagh-ant, they are struck.

Further examples :-

Khushtagh-án, I am killed.

Giptagh-án, I am seized.

Basthagh-án, I am bound.

Burthagh-án, I am carried away.

Dirthagh-án, I am torn.

Sokhtagh-án, I am burnt.

(3)

Alternative form

Jathiy-án, I am struck.

Singular

1. Jathiy-án, I am struck.
2. Jathiy-eń, thou art struck.
3. Jathiy-e, he is struck.

Plural

1. Jathiy-ún, we are struck.
2. Jathiy-eń, you are struck.
3. Jathiy-ant, they are struck.

Further examples :-

Khushtiy-án, I am killed.

Giptiy- án, I am seized.

Basthiy- án, I am bound.

Burthiy- án, I am carried away.

Dirthiy- án, I am torn.

Sokhtiy- án, I am burnt.

166. Of the past imperfect there are three different forms to choose from; (1) jathagh-ethán, I was struck; (2) jathiy-

ethán, I was struck; and (3) janij-íthán, I was struck. The first two are the participles with the past imperfect tense of the substantive verb added. The third, janij-íthán, is the root of the verb in the passive voice with the same tense added, but slightly modified, yá e majhul having become yá e ma'ruíf. It is a form in daily use; several examples of it will be found in the translations given in this work.

Obs 1. For janij-íthant, we may use janij-íthán or janij-íthíyant. And so with any other verb.

Obs 2. The forms janij-íthán, etc. are pronounced as if written jani-jíthán etc., the letter j being used as a prefix to help out the sound of the substantive verb.

The past imperfect

Jathagh-ethán, I was struck.

Singular

1. Jathagh-ethán, I was struck.
2. Jathagh-ethén, thou wast struck.
3. Jathagh-ath, eth, he was struck.

Plural

1. Jathagh-ethún, we were struck.
2. Jathagh-ethén, you were struck.
3. Jathagh-ethant, they were struck.

Further examples:-

Khushtagh-ethán, I was killed.

Giptagh-ethán, I was seized.

Basthagh-ethán, I was bound.

Burthagh-ethán, I was carried away.

Dirthagh-ethán, I was torn.

Sokhtagh-ethán, I was burnt.

(4)

Jathiy-ethán, I was struck.

Singular

1. Jathiy-ethán, I was struck.
2. Jathiy-ethen, thou wast struck.
3. Jathiy-ath, eth, I was struck.

Plural

1. Jathiy-ethún, we were struck.
2. Jathiy-ethen, you were struck.
3. Jathiy-ethant, they were struck.

Further examples :-

Khushtiy-ethán, I was killed.

Giptiy-ethán, I was seized.

Basthiy-ethán, I was bound.

Burthiy-ethán, I was carried away.

Dirthiy-ethán, I was torn.

Sokhtiy-ethán, I was burnt.

(4)

Third form

Janij-íthán, I was struck.

Singular

1. Janij-íthán, I was struck.
2. Janij-íthen, thou wast struck.
3. Janij-ítha, he was struck.

Plural

1. Janij-íthún, we were struck.
2. Janij-íthen, you were struck.
3. Janij-íthant, they were struck.

Further examples:-

Khushtiy-íthán, I was killed.

Giptiy-íthán, I was seized.

Basthiy-íthán, I was bound.

Burthiy-íthán, I was carried away.

Dirthiy-íthán, I was torn.

Sokhtiy-íthán, I was burnt.

Infinitive, janijagh.

First participle. Jathiya, being struck

Second participle, jathigha, being struck

Third participle, janijatha, struck

Fourth participle, janijithiya, struck.

Áń-hí pith di murtho khapta, his father fell dead (him-of the-father having-died fell).

Áń-hí pith ma phira murtho khapta, his father fell dead on the spot (him-of the-father on the spot having-died fell).

Thau pha chi e-r'g-a khutha, why have you acted in this manner (thee-by for what this-way-in his it been done)?

Aulá áń-hi nám Muhammad bitha, guda Ahmad bitha, at first he was called Muhammad, then he came to be known as Ahamad (first him-of the-name Muhammad became, then Ahmad it became).

Thau wath-í bráth-a go gandagh-e kár-a khutha, you have behaved badly towards your brother (thee-by thee-of the-brother with bad work has been done).

Áń wath-í pith-a go gandagh-e kár khanagh-e, he is behaving badly towards his father (he himself-of the father with bad work is doing).

Zi ná-duráh atheń, were you ill yesterday (yesterday ill were you)?

Zi ná-duráh ne-y-athán I was not ill yesterday (yesterday ill not I was).

Áń ba-kho nishtagh-ant, where did they live (they where sat)?

Áń daryá kharagh-a nindagh-ant, they dwell on the bank of river (they the-river-of the bank-on sit).

QUESTIONNAIRE

1. State what you know of the passive voice in Balochi.
2. Show, by examples, how the infinitive of the passive voice formed.
3. Put into Balochi; he may be burnt; you may be carried away; I may be killed; they will be caught.
4. How is the present imperfect tense of the passive voice formed? Give an example of this. Is there more than one method?
5. Translate into Balochi; he is carried away; you are burnt; they are killed?
6. Translate into English; jathiyant; basthiyeñ; sakhtiyúñ.
7. Explain and give the English meanings of : janijitháñ; jathiyetheñ; dirthaghetháñ.
8. In how many forms in the past imperfect of the passive voice found? Give an example in each case.
9. Put into Balochi; we shall start to-morrow, and go on stage by stage.
10. Translate into English; ma thagi na khanagh-áñ; má thagi na khutha; janikh-e-á thagi khutha ki ma chhorav áñ.

CHAPTER XIV.

COMPOUND VERBS.

167. Balochi compounds are in reality verbal combinations rather than true compound verbs as we know them. The best known of these may be, for the sake of lucidity, classified as potentials, completives, coninnuatives, and desideratives. Their names are perhaps all that is formidable about them.

168. The potential compound is made up of the past participle of any transitive verb with the various tenses and persons of the verb khanagh, to do; e.g., shwá ma-na ditha khan-eń, can you see me? Má tha-ra ditha na khan-áń, I cannot see you. The last member of the construction denotes the ability or inability to do that which has been indicated or expressed by the first member.

169. In this construction the final short vowel a of the past participle is sometimes dropped; má dith na khutha, I could not see (it); áń-hía khutha nakhutha, he could not do it.

Obs 1. The idea of using the conjunctive participle in place of the past participle in this formation appears to be incorrect. It is heard used however.

Obs 2. The construction ma ravagh-a ne-y-áń is not potential at all. Its literal meaning is, I am not going. It is in imitation of our old Urdú friend mań jáne ká nahin, I am not of going. I am not the person to go, catch me going. It is a useful and highly idiomatic construction, but it is not potential. The form ravagh-a is the genitive case of ravagh. Compare this idiom with Sindhi; achana tá na jiko, then he is not likely to come.

Obs 3. In this combination khanagh, can, of course, be compounded with its own past participle; e.g., má khuth na khutha, I was unable, I could not, I could not do (it).

Examples of the potential compounds:-

E rang-a khutha na khan-ant, they cannot do so (this manner done not they may do).

Má go thau siyálgiri khutha na khan-úń, we cannot compete with you (we with thee equality made not may make).

Áń-hán khuth na khutha, they could not do it (them-by done not was done).

Wakht-a má wártha na khutha, I could not eat at the time (the-time-at me-by eaten not was done).

Many other examples are given in the exercises and translations.

170. The potential just discussed has reference to transitive verbs. When dealing with intransitives, such as to walk, to-stand, to arrive, and many others, the place of the verb, khanagh, to do, is taken by biagh, to be, to become: e.g., shwá wath-í sar-a kharo bitha na b-eń, you will not be able to stand on your head; ma yak máh-a ángo rasitha na b-án, I shall not be able to arrive there in a month. This construction is of limited application, being generally confined to the future tenses. Like khanagh, the verb biagh can be compounded with itself; thus we come to have the verbs khutha khanagh, to be able to do, and bitha biagh, to be able to do, to be able to become.

Obs. Pakkhto potential compounds are made up of the conjunctive participle of a principal verb and the various tenses and persons of the intransitive verb shawl, to become, to go: e.g., tsok lah khuda'e sara khabare kawalai shi, who can talk with God (who with God with conversation make can)?

171. What may be termed a completive compound is got by combining the conjunctive participle of a principal verb, that denoting the action, with the present perfect tense of ravagh, to go. This present perfect tense is irregular as regards ravagh, but in itself quite regular : shuthagh-ání, shuthagh-ení, shutha; shuthagh-úń, shuthagh-ení, shuthagh-ant, I have gone, thou hast gone, etc. Shutha is frequently shortened to shtha: e.g., ání-hí pith murtho shutha, his father is dead (him-of the-father having-died is gone). Besides being completive, its signification is passive and emphatic. Its first member denotes as action and its second the completion of that action. In the course of conversation the example just given might mean; why, his father is already dead! This compound is confined to the present perfect tense, and usually to the 3rd persons of that tense.

Obs 1. The verb ravagh, to go, has its own, regular, present perfect tense, raptagh-ání, raptagh-ení, rapta: raptagh-úń, raptagh-ení, raptagh-ant, I have gone, thou hast gone etc. shuthagh-ání is a second form, and one in very wide use, as will have been seen.

Obs 2. The completive compound is distinct from the compound sentence in which the conjunctive participle figures and takes the place of a conjunction as well as that of a verb; e.g., wázhá thartho ákhto, master has returned, master has gone and come back.

Obs 3. The Sindhi completive compound is formed by attaching to the conjunctive participle of a principal verb certain other verbs denoting completion, etc. : e.g., kháe vathanu, to have done eating; kare chukanu, to finish doing; vathi rashanu, to have taken, to finish taking.

Examples of completive compounds:-

Duzhman shingo-shángo driktho shuthagh-ání, the enemy fled in all directions (the-enemy here, there, having-run have gone).

Thir ání-hí saghar-a pár gwasto shutha, the bullets passed clean through his body (the-bullets from-him-of-the-body through having passed went).

Darmán udartho shutha, the powder blew up (the-powder having-blown-up went). We might use the plural shuthagh-ant, the subject darmán being very often considered a plural noun.

Báz-e mard murtho shutha, many men died. The presence of báz-e justifies the singular shutha. Why indicate the plural more than once in a sentence? Asks the Baloch. Why, indeed!

172. The continuative compound is made up of the present participle ending in ána of the principal verb and the various tenses and persons of ravagh, to go : e.g., ání likh-ána ravagh-e ma gush-ána ravagh-ání, he goes on writing and I go on talking. It denotes the continuance of an action, and may be made to refer to past, present, or future time.

Examples of the continuative compounds:-

Thau pha chi wafs-ána ravagh-ení, why do you go on sleeping (thou for what sleeping guest on)?

Thau e rang-a gush-ení, mashe ání duz-ána rav-í, you may say so, but he will go on stealing (thou this way mayest speak, but he stealing will go).

Nariyán thash-ána rapta, the horse went on galloping (the-horse galloping went).

Ma har ro har ro lághar bi-ána raptagh-ání, I kept getting thinner every day (I everyday every day thin becoming went on).

Má juz-ána shuthagh-úní, we kept journeying on (we going went).

173. In intensive compounds the leading verb is always a conjunctive and intensifies. The second verb –it may be any verb– modifies and intensifies in a degree the meaning conveyed by the first; e.g., ání-híá wath-í nariyán drikentho duz phadha burtha, he galloped after the thief. Baragh, past participle burtha, means to take away. Drikentha alone would not give the same meaning, nor would burtha. In the intensive compound the connexion between the principal and secondary verb is close, supporting and intensifying, much more so than in the ordinary sentence, where the conjunctive participle acts as a connective particle as well as a verb.

Obs. Compare this with the Sindhi idiom; mari mananu, having died, to go, to die; ji pavanu, having lived to fall, to live.

Examples of the intensive compound:-

Sarbura yá khargaz jhati dátho áh-hí whard burtho bá gipta, suddenly a kite swooped downed and carried away his food. Had the sentence ended with burtha, which it could, the description of what happened would have been weak and incomplete: as it is, the picture of the occurrence is complete and vivid.

174. An inceptive compound is got by palcing the present perfect tense of khafagh, to fall, before the inflected infinitive of another or principal verb : e.g., guda áh-hán khaptagh-áh dris janagh-a, they then began to dance, they then took to dancing. The present perfect tense of khafagh is khaotagh-áh, khaptagh-eh, khapta; khapagh-úh, khaptagh-eh, khaptagh-ant, khaptagh-áh or khaptant, I have fallen, thou art fallen, etc. The present perfect of khafagh, to fall, gives to the principal verb the idea of beginning the action denoted by it. For the sake of clearness and greater emphasis the preposition pha, on, etc., is sometimes inserted before the inflected infinitive : e.g., guda wazir wath-í hál khapta pha likhenagh-a, the minister then began to write out his case. Less frequently pha is made to follow the inflected infinitive.

175. This same sense of inception is got by using the present perfect tense of mirenagh, to attack, in place of that of khafagh, to fall. The conjunction of this tense of mirenagh, to attack, is quite regular: mirenthagh-ání, mirenthagh-eń, mirenthagh; mirenthagh-úń, mirenthagh-eń, mirenthagh-ant or mirenthagh-ání, I attacked, thou attachedst, etc. but this construction is less frequently heard.

Obs 1. This idea of “falling”, “attacking”, to denote “to begin”, is exemplified in our own provincial idiom, strange to say: then they fell to with a will. This used to be said of eating in the good old days of the barons. Again, when speaking of evildoer we still hear: they then took to thiving, meaning, they then began to steal. Assuredly, idioms travel far.

Obs 2. A somewhat similar idea is conveyed by the Sindhi compound pai thianu, having fallen to eat, to eat on, to eat up. A Persian will say, man bi-khinda sftidam, I began to laugh, I fell to laughing.

Examples of inceptive compounds:-

Guda áń e kíssae khapta gushagh-a, he then began to unfold this story (then he this story fell to tell).

Guda pha wath-ání khaptagh-ání miragh-a, they then began to fight among themselves (then among themselves they fell to fight).

Tholagh khaptagh-ání pha kurainagh-a, the jackals took to howling (the-jackals fell to howl).

Bing-gal di khaptagh-ant pha bhaunkagh-a, the dog also began to bark (the-dogs also fell to bark).

Guda ma khaptagh-án ravagh-a, then I began to go (then I fell to go). In the above sentences we might have translated: telling, fighting, howling, barking, going, instead of to tell, to fight, etc.

176. Nominal compounds constitute a numerous class. They consist of a substantive, an adjectival, or a preposition so combined with an original verb as to form with it a singal idea. Some verbs enter more freely into such construction than other. Frequently the noun or adjective takes the place of an object in the mind of the speaker: e.g., thau drogh bandagh-ení, thou liest. Here drogh means false, and bandagh, to fasten, and the union of the two, to lie. Nominal compounds may be transitive or intransitive and may govern almost any case, according to the sense conveyed. A list of the more common is given below: to enumerate all would be a futile task.

Examples of nominal compound:-

Án-hí dem-a khas-e-á drogh bastha, someone has lied to him (him-of before someone-by false has been fastened).

Har do bráth khishár-a khishagh-ant, both brothers till the ground (both brothers crops cultivate).

Ma-í chana shart janagh jawáín n-ení, in my opinion it is not wise to gamble (me-of the-opinion-in gambling to strike good not is).

Guda má tha-ra wáhú khutha, I then shouted to you (then me-by thee-to a-shout was made). Wáhú khanagh, to shout.

Er-be-y-á, come down.

177. In some instances it will be found that from long usage the original verb has so coalesced with its prefix as to be almost beyond recognition : e.g., ashkanagh, to hear, which is a combination of ash, from, and khanagh, to do. In a few cases two verbs are found conjugated together, as if they were a single verb with a single meaning; e.g., ilagh-deagh, to let go; biagh-ravagh, to suffice; tháhagh-deagh, to arrange; ziragh-áragh, to fetch.

Obs . Where the nominal compound consists of a noun and a verb or an adjective and a verb, the two words should be written separately. Other parts of speech may be joined to their verb by a hyphen. The prefixes d, er, mán etc. should be always so joined.

178. The frequentative compound denotes frequent repetition of an action, not continuous uninterrupted action. The latter requires the present participle, as has been shown. It consists of the conjunctive participle of khafagh, to fall, followed by a principle verb, e.g., ání mar ma-na khapta zá deagh-e, that man is constantly abusing me. This construction is admissible with all verbs, transitive and intransitive alike.

Examples of frequentative compounds:-

Thau áf khapto waragh-ení, you are constantly drinking water (thou water having fallen art drinking).

Án-hiá ma-na khapto ditha, he used always to see me (him-by me having fallen was seen).

Tha-í bráth khapto duzagh-e, your brother is continually stealing (thee-of the brother having fallen is stealing).

Ma edha khapto kár khan-ání, I shall continue to work here (I here having fallen work will do).

Má wath odha khapto kár khutha, for myself I contined to work there (me-by, myself, there having fallen work was done).

Ráhak khapto manger bahainagh-etha shár gushagh-etha, the farmer was ploughing and singing (the farmer having fallen the-plough was speeding a-song was singing).

179. Permissive compounds are formed by placing the inflected infinitive of any verb before the various tenses of ilagh, to leave, abandon, allow. They thus come to signfy permission to do the act expressed by the infinitive of the principal verb; e.g., ání mar khas-e-ára wath-í logh-a ágh-a ne-il-í, that man will not allow anyone to come to his house.

Examples of permissive compounds:-

Án-hiára andaraa ágh-a m'il, do not let him come inside (him inside to come not permit).

Má án-hiá gushagh-e ne-y-ishta, I did not allow him to speak (me-by him-to speak not was allowed).

Ma tha-ra ravagh-a kh-il-án, I may allow you to go (I thee to go may allow).

Nawán ma-na ágh-a b-il-í, perhaps he may let me come (perhaps me to come he may let).

Khas-ar andara ágh-a m'il, do not let anyone go outside (anyone outside to go do not let).

180. The desiderative compound differs very little in construction from the permissive; in the permissive the secondary verb as we have seen is ilagh, to permit, in the desiderative it is lotagh, to wish, etc. Both require the principal verb to be in the inflected infinitive: e.g., ma andar-a ágh-a lotagh-án, I wish to come inside; án Derav-a ravagh-a lotagh-e, he wishes to go to Dera Gházi Khan. When used by itself and not as a compound lotagh, translate the English verb, to long for, to want, to desire, to wish, to beg, to invite, to demand, to summon. The verb zánagh, to know, can also be used in a desiderative sense: e.g., ma Balochi sikhagh-a zán-án, I wish to learn Balochi. It is, however, generally restricted in its use, expressing only a desire for information or knowledge of some kind.

181. The conjunctive participle has thus four different uses to which it can be put, all more or less distinct: (1) in the compound sentence, e.g., wazir thartha ákhta, the minister has returned; (2) in the completive compound, e.g., Mohan murtho shutha, Mohan is dead; (3) in the intensive compound, e.g., tha-í bachh-á máhí ísho dátha, your son let go the fish; (4) in the frequentative compound, e.g., brinj khapto shwashkagh-e, he is always selling rice. In the compound sentence its use is very clear (140). In the completive compound it is always followed by the present perfect tense of ravagh, to go; shuthagh-án, etc. In the case of the frequentative it is the conjunctive participle of khafagh, to fall, that is used; khapto followed by a principal verb. No other conjunctive participle can enter into this construction, and no other conjunctive participle conveys the meaning of frequency. There remains the intensive compound, and here it will be found that the two verbs do not retain their full, original, and separate significations. The second verb invariably modifies and intensifies in a degree, the meaning conveyed by the first or participial element.

Obs 1. Urdú and Hindi we have the same class of intensive compound; e.g., us ne us ko dál diyá, he threw it down, where dál is one form of the conjunctive participle of dálná, to place.

Obs . The object sought in classifying the compounds is to help the student with his translation of English into the language. A perfect knowledge of the potential compound can alone help one to translate correctly "can" and "cannot". And no with the other compounds.

CHAPTER XV

THE ADVERB

182. There are very few original adverbs in Balochí. A considerable number consist of nouns in their oblique form, that is with suffix attached, some are adverbial phrases rather than adverbs, and a few others are formed adjectives with the help of the suffixes ígha, íkha, and ía eg., ní now; án-wakht-a then, narm-ígha, slowly, sakh-ía very exceedingly, jawán-íkha, well. In the north the terminations ígha and íkha are preferred, in the south ía.

183. All adverbs may be conveniently divided into six classes, according to their signification ---

- a) Adverbs denoting time
- b) = = = = rest in a place
- c) = = = = direction towards
- d) = = = = = From
- e) = = = = number or quantity
- f) = = = = manner

Obs 1 The following lists are by no means exhaustive, but they include most of those in daily, general use.

Obs 2 To show their source, their composition, more clearly, and to enable the student to understand and coin others for himself, components have been separated by a hyphen when the adverbs are first given. In the examples, in the conversational sentences, this is not always necessary nor possible.

QUESTIONNAIRE

1. What part of speech is khushí-a? How do you account for the suffix a?
2. What are the chief sources of the Balochí adverbs?
3. In what part of the country would you expect to hear sidháígha, narmígha, jawánigha, jawaní-a sakhí-a?
4. What are the English meanings of pharan-doshí, phis-phairí, sar-e-sál?
5. Express in Balochí; sooner or later, nowadays, again and again, last night?
6. Break up the following words into their components Roshtika, barbaría, shingo, shedha, shodha?
7. Give the Balochí for; in this direction, hence, whence, from there, down stream?
8. Translate into Balochí. let him come on behind. I know he has gone towards the river?
9. Translate into Balochí; Do you know where he has gone? How will you go there?
10. Where is the adverb in the following sentence; duz dí dír díma ákhta?

THE PREPOSITION

184. Preposition as we know them from a small class in Balochí. This want is in part made good by a number of so-called postpositions, and in part by preposition-postpositions, that is duplicates or pairs. The correct use of these three classes is by no means an easy matter.

185. The only cases governed by these three classes of prepositional participles are the genitives, the locatives and the ablatives. For the remaining cases the addition of suffixes, the position of words in the sentence, or both, suffice to make the sense comparatively clear. With the genitive case the postposition is generally expressed, seldom left to be understood, with the locative and ablative cases the preposition is very frequently left to be understood. Especially is this so in the matter of go, with, etc, and azh, from etc, prepositions governing the ablative. But in almost every instance of an inflected noun or pronoun the preposition omitted can be readily inferred from the context. To be sure there will occur cases where this is not so, chiefly owing to the fact that many sentences are left elliptical. The Baloch seldom employs a superfluous word.

Obs What is here meant by “inflected noun or pronoun” is a noun or pronoun with its suffix. There is no real inflection of the noun in Balochí.

186. In the following examples the postpositions have been given precedence, for one thing they govern the genitive case, which stands first in the order of declension, and for another they are by far the more numerous. They have been placed in alphabetical order for easy reference by the student. When used with nouns in the singular the short a denoting the genitive case is frequently omitted, on the whole more often than not. With the genitive plural it is otherwise, the genitival ending, ání is nearly always expressed. In the case of pronouns, singular and plural, the genitival endings are nearly always heard; their expression is the rule their suppression the exception.

Andara, in, inside –

Bíng-a khan kotav-a andara, put the dog in the room (the-dog make a-room-in)

Buna, under----

Haw-e drashk buna nind-ún, let us sit under the tree (this tree under let us sit)

Lake daula, this postposition seldom if ever takes the inflected cases of nouns in the singular number. In the case of nouns in the plural the genitival suffix ání may be expressed, but not necessarily. The pronouns, singular and plural, require the suffixes when governed by it.

Chakha, in, with, towards, on –

Ma-tha-í chakha báwar na khan-án, I shall not trust you (I thee-of on trust not shall make)

Bádsháh ma-í chakha rází bí, the king will be pleased with me (the-king me-of with pleased will be)

Ma-í gíst rupíya án-hí chakha en, he owes me twenty rupees (me-of twenty rupees him-of on are)

Guda bádsháh mihrwán bítha án-hí chakha, then the king became kindly disposed towards him (then the-king kindly became him-of on)

Nirwár wazír chakha en, the minister is responsible for justice (justice the-minister on is ) (Cf the English “it is up to you”, “it is on you”)

In the case of nouns the singular is sometimes inflected and sometimes left uninflected eg., esh-ía ma-í dast-dil-a chakha

er-khan-eth, place it on the palm of my hand (it me-of the-hand-palm-of on place), láhoh khoh chakha n-en, Lahore is not on a hill (Lahore a-hill on not is).

Dáígh, fit for –

Zahm ki asten bádsháh dáígh en, it is a sword fit for a king (the-sword that is a-king fit-for is). It is not often heard in everyday conversation.

Daula, like –

Ma-í sángha thí haw-án daula jorain, make another like that for me (me-of for another that like make)

Dema, in front of –

Án-hí dema juz, walk in front of me (me-of before go). Tha-í dema án-híá drogh bastha, he has lied to you (thee-of before him-by lying has been fastened)

Gura, with –

Khas-e ki án-hí gura rauth, go án-híá mir-í, he will fight with whomsoever may go with him (whoever that him-of with may go, with him he will fight)

Gwara, with, near –

Án-hí gwara mál báz ath, he owned much property (him-of with property much was). Ma-í gwara mál hechí n-en, I have no property at all (me-of with property any not is). Jágrú-ání gwara mál túfak-án astant, had the sentries rifles (the-sentries-of with rifles were)? Bádsháh gwara wazír ne-y-ath, the king had no minister (the-king with minister not was)

Láfa, in, into, inside, with –

Áf láfa kharo bíth, let him stand in the water (the-water in standing let him be). Ní han-edha drik-a de-ún dirá láfa, let us jump into the river here and now (now even-here a jum let us give the river into). Ma dí án-hí láfa rav-án, I also shall go inside of it (I also it-of inside shall go). Phash-ání gozhd-ání láfa áwár khuth, he used to mix it with the flesh of goats (goats-of the-flesh-of in mixed he used to make) this example is from Dames' textbook. The noun gozhd, flesh, is generally thus treated as a plural noun khuth is contingent perfect tense denoting habitude.

Nazí, near –

Ákhto bádsháh mání-a nazí bíthagh-ún, we came and drew near to the knig's palace (having-come the-king-of the-palace-of near we became).

Nazíkha, near –

Shutho nishtagh-án wazír nazíkha, we went and sat down near the minister (having-gone I sat down the-minister near)

Negha, to –

Ma-í negha m-y-ár-í, do not bring him to me (me-of to not bring-him). Ma-na tha-í negha shashtátha-í, he has sent me to you (me thee-of to has been sent-by-him). E rang-a likhetha-í wath-í bráth negha, he thus wrote to his brother (this way-in it was writthen-by-him himself-of the-brother to).

Nemgha, against, to –

Bádsháh-á Lashkar-e án-hí nemgha zurtha, the king has brought an army against him (the-king-by an-army him-of against has neen taken). Pha haw-án khán tha-í nemgha ákhtagh-án, for that reason I have come to you (for that reason thee-of to I have come). Ma-í nemgha wath-í dem khan, turn you face to me (me-of to thyself-of the face make)

In the singular, if the word governed be a noun, it generally remains unchanged eg., ma, wath rav-án sardár nemgha, I shall go myself to the chief (I myself shall go the chief to).

Níánwán, in, through, between –

Khoh-ání níánwán, among the hills (the-hills-of among). Kaizí bar-eth, kotav níánwán khan-eth, take prisoner hence, and shut him up in a room (the-prisoner take away, a-room in make (him)). Ma-í níánwán chi aiv-e gindaghen, what particular fault do you see in me (me-of in what particular fault do you see)? In this way “the e of unity” may sometimes take the place of an adjective.

Nawán án-hí níánwán sheshan na guz-í, perhaps the needle will not go through it (perhaps it of the-needle not may go).

Azmán-a dighár níánwán, between heaven and earth, here are two nouns in the genitive singular with suffixes attached governed by the same postposition. This is regular and in accordance with the rules for postpositions, none the less, it is rare.

It is sometimes difficult to render this postposition into idiomatic English eg., ma-í dil níánwán gantry báz en, I am greatly worried (me-of the-heart in anxiety much is).

Phadha, after –

Sál-e-a phadha bokhta, he was released after a year (a-year-of after he was released). Kharde rosh phadha ná-duráh bíthagh-án, I fell ill after a few days (a-few days after ill I became). Ma-í phadha be-y-á, follow me (me-of after come). It may be thus used with reference to time or place. (Cf. Hindí and Urdú píchhe)

Phajía, with, along with –

Thau dí ba-rau phajía, you also go along. That is án-hí phajía, with him etc, according to the context.

Randa, after –

Ghorav-e ma-í randa man-agh-etha, a troop of horse was coming after me (a-troop-of-horse me-of after was coming). Nawán pith án-hí randa ba-rauth, the father may go after him (perhaps the-father him-of after may go).

Ma rawán bíthagh-án avzár randa, I set out after the horseman (I going became the-horseman after).

Má rawán bíthagh-ún avzár-ání randa, we set out after the horsemen (we going became the horseman-of after)

Sánga, to for –

Chíar mard shuthagh-ant saudágarí sánga, four men went forth to trade (four men went trading for)

Má sadh rupía dátha tha-í sánga, I gave one hundred rupees for you (me-by one hundred rupees were (was)given thee-of for)

Má gíst rupía dátha esh-í sánga, I gave twenty rupees for this (me-by twenty rupees were (was) given this-of for)

Sara, on, to, at, from, on account of, about, with, against, of –

Haw-án khoh sara varf asten, is there snow on that hill (that hill on snow is)?

Nawán shahr sara shutha, he may have gone to the city (oerhaps the-city to he has gone)

Ma haw-án rosh-án derav sara Baloch kham astant, there were few Baloches in Dera Ghazi Khan in those days (in those day Dera Ghazi Khan in Baloches few were).

Tha-í sír sara e domb sání bí, this mistrel will be present at you wedding (thee-of the-wedding at his mistrel present will be).

Hamsáyagh-ání sara jang bítha, a fight took place on account of (some) refugees (refugees-of on account of a-fight took place)

Haw-e cháth-ání sara khishár hachí n-en, there is no cultivation got from these wells (these wells-of from cultivation any not is).

Har do duz-án jhero laitha zahm sara, the two thieves quarreled about the sword (the-two thieves a-quarrel made (applied) the-sword about).

Rosh-e má-í sara ranj bítha, one day he became annoyed with me (one day me-of with grived he became)

Thau án-hí sara doshí gwashta drogh, you have made a false charge against him (thee-by him-of against a-fault has been spoken falsely).

Án janikh sara sháhí bítha, he has become enamoured of the girl (he the-girl of enamoured has become).

Pha wath-án adathagh-ant mádhin-ání, they quarreled among themselves regarding their mares (among themselves they quarreled (their) mares-of regarding)

Sometimes it cannot be represented in literal English, eg., yá khoh-e sara shutha wáhú khutha, he went up hill and shouted, sál sara kh-ákht, he used to come once a year, khórí avzár-án sara ákhto sahra bíthagh-ant, the pursuing horseme hove in sight

Shera, under –

Drashk shera kharo bíth, let him stand under the tree
(the-tree under standing let him be)

Puhal shera b-ún, let us get under the bridge (the-bridge under let us be)

Wájha, like –

Thí zen-e haw-e wájha ma-na be-y-ár de, bring me another saddle just like this (another saddle this-even like me-to bring give)

Thau ganokh wájha gushagh-en, you talk like a fool (thou fool like talkest)

Wásta, for the sake of –

Wásta is of infrequent use in Balochí. when heard it is generally in imitation of the Urdú idiom, and in such exclamatory expressions as, wásta Hudhá-ía, for God's sake, Hudhá-í wásta ma-na áf-a de, for God's sake give me water. It can thus be used both before and after the governed word.

187. There are only a few prepositions that take the locative case after them. Two of these, pha, on, and, phar, on account of, are often used in conjunction with chi, what? To form the interrogative adverb pha-chi and phar-chi, why? The former pha, also enters into the expression, pha haw-án khán, for that reason, on that account, an expression dearly loved of the Baloch. The preposition, however, in most general use with this case is ma, in. when it comes before a word beginning with a vowel. Short or long, it takes a nasal n to help in pronunciation eg., man ín rosh-án, in these days, man án rosh-án, during those days.

Avr, avur, on, upon, into –

Jar-án án-hí jind-a avur khuthagh-ant-ísh, they put clothes on her body (clothes her-of the-body on were-made-by-them). In reality avr is more of a prefix than of a preposition; one of the prefixes of khanagh, to do, to make. In the example just given it cannot be placed before the governed word jind-a nor can it be well separated from the verb.

Ma, man, man, in –

Ma-ín rosh-án dán hechí n-en, there is no grain nowadays (in these days grain any not is).

Ma zor-a yá rang ant, they are equal in strength (in strength one kind they are).

It is frequently used to make up adverbial phrases denoting time and manner eg., man ín vela, now, at once, ma dil-a, inwardly, ma sohrá-ía, outwardly.

Pha, on, in, after, to, along, by way of, at –

Pha haw-e rang-a bítha, it happened in this way (in this way it became)

Pha tha-í miragh ákhta, he has come to fight with you (with thee-of to fight he has come)

Pha haw-e dastúr en, it is after this fashion.

Nawán pha rák-a kh-á-íth, he may come by the road (perhaps by the-road he may come)

Pha láhor dag-a shutha wath-í logh-a, he went home by way of Lahore (by Lahore road he went himself-of the-house-to)

Baghá ma ákhtagh-án pha wath-í logh-a, in the evening I arrived home (in-the-evening I came to myself-of the-house-to).

When it follows the word it governs that word is usually an inflected infinitive denoting purpose or intention eg., ma ákhtagh-án bhá gíragh-a pha, I have come to buy

Phar, for, on account of –

Dohmí phar thau ath, the second one was for you (the second for thee was).

Phar thau án-hí díl sakhía lotagh-e, he greatly desires you (for thee hin-of the-heart greatly longs)

Phar maní miragh ákhta, he came to fight with me (for me-of fighting he came)

If for the sake of euphony or emphasis it come after the governed word the meaning generally remains the same eg., hon-a phar hon, blood for blood, an eye for an eye, har khas wath-í wath-í matbal-a phar síyáral en, all are wise as regards their own interests

It will have been noted of this preposition that the sense and force of it are generally that which would have been got had it governed the genitive case. The sense is hardly ever locative.

188. The prepositions most generally found governing the ablative case are go, with, and azh, etc, form go is also found in the forms gon and gon. All three forms denote accompaniment – with, along with – as their general meaning, but go itself very accomplished. It thus comes to assist in the formation of the adverbial phrases of manner eg., go zor-a, forcibly, go dil-a heartily. In this sense the preposition is frequently left to be understood, so that the ablative case with its suffix becomes an adverb, eg., (go)

khushí-a, happily, (go) zahírí-a, sadly. It is well, however, to remember that such forms are ablative cases pure and simple.

Azh, ash, chi, from, than –

Azh kha-ía bhá gipta, from whom have you bought it?

Azh báz rosh gwar má ákhtagh-en, you have come to see me after a long time (from many days near me you have come)

It enters largely into sentences denoting comparison eg., ín azh án mazann en, this is bigger than that (this than that big is), ma-í zahm azh tha-í zahm drázh en, my sword is longer than yours (me-of the-sword than thee-of the-sword long is).

It is similarly employed to denote separation or distinction eg., balochí azh brahuí dara en, Balochí is distinct from Brahuí (Balochí from Brahuí outside is).

It may follow the governed word without any change of meaning and without any apparent added emphasis eg., ahmad azh kaul gipta-í, he made Ahmad promise (Ahmad from a-promise was-taken-by). Ráhak rapta thurs azh lágghar bí-ána, through fear the crofter went on getting thinner and thinner (the-crofter went on fear from thin becoming) Dames

With azh the suffix a of the ablative is generally suppressed.

Go, with, along, to –

Án go khas-e-a hálwar-a khanagh-etha, he was talking to someone (he with someone speech was making)

Khai go thau rauth, who will go with you (who with thee will go?)?

It is often separated from the noun or pronoun it governs eg., án-híá do-ar go yak-e túfak-a jathá, did he hit both with one shot? Phith go wath-í bachh-a vash na bí, the father will not be pleased with his son (the-father with himself-of the-son pleased not will be)

Its presence sometimes cannot be shown in idiomatic English eg., án go khas-e báwar na khanagh-e, does he trust no one (he with anyone trust not making)?

It is less frequently placed after the governed word, and then only for emphasis eg., wath-í saláh go khan-án, I shall act as I pleased (myself-of the-counsel on I shall act), esh-ía zahm-a go phoh, spit it with your sword (it (your) sword with pierce).

In this position it may even take the genitive plural eg., gíst avzár-ání ákhta, he came with twenty horsemen (twenty horseman-of with he came).

Gon, with, along with –

Án pha chí gon na shutha, why has he not gone with (them, etc.) (he for why along-with not has gone)?

The noun or pronoun is thus often left to be understood. In fact, it generally is when this form of go is used.

Should the following word begin with a vowel gon becomes gon eg., án dí gon ákhta, he also came with (them, etc).

Gwar, with, to –

Begahá juz gwar má, go with me in the morning (in-the-morning go with me).

Har ro har ro gwar má phedh-ágh-e, he comes to me every morning (every day every day to me he is coming).

Gwar wath-í páro mard ba-rau, go to the men of your own section (to yourself-of the-section men go).

It may, and often does, denote possession eg., gwar mardum-án zar báz en, the people have plenty of money (with the-people money plenty is), gwar dardar-a thíth báz ant, the chief has many serfs (with the-chief serfs many are).

It sometimes stands after the noun or pronoun it governs without undergoing any change of meaning eg., ákhtagh-ant ráhak bachh-a gwar, they came to the cultivator's son (they came the-crofter-of the son to). This is the rhythmic sing-song style of the Baloch story-teller.

189. A few of the prepositions that have just been considered sometimes combine with certain postpositions of similar or some-what similar meaning to form compounds, preposition-post-positions. The governed word then stands between the two participles, and will be found affected chiefly by the preposition and in a lesser degree by the postposition. The combinations most frequently heard and met with in the textbooks are given below

Go ....gon, with –

Ikhtár zar go án gon n-en, he has not got so much money (so-much money with him with not is)

Sardar go Lashkar gon en, the chief is with the army (the-chief with the-army with is)

Ma dí go thau gon án, I also am with you (I also with thee with am).

This combination may denote possession eg., go thau zahm go en, you have the sword (with thee- the-sword with is).

Got from the same root is the postpositon goníkha, in accordance with. It is used in a few phrases only eg., sh'ara goníkha, in accordance with the law (in keeping with the law, lawfully).

Go . . . . phajía, with, along, with –

Me-y-á má phajía, come along with me (come with me along)

Ma wath-í logh-a go zál-a phajía akistagh-ethán, I was sleeping at home with my wife (I myself-of the-house-at with (my) wife along was sleeping).

Go ráhak-a phajía shuthagh-án, I went along with the cultivator (with the-cultivator along I went).

The postpreposition phajía is sometimes used alone with the same sense of accompaniment eg., thau dí ba-rau phajía, you go along (with him, them, etc)

An-hía phajía palang chakha nind, sit beside him on the bed (him with the-bed on sit).

Go . . sara, with –

Ba-ro-eth, go har do sara saláh khan-eth, be off, consult both (go-away, with both with consultation make)

Azh . . . . . sawá, besides –

Azh mohan-a sawá thí ma-na pasand hachí n-en, I do not care of anyone except Mohan (than Mohan besides other me-to pleasing any not is)

Azh . . . . phadha, after –

Azh chikhtar rosh-án phadha thau ákhtagh-en, what a time you have been in coming (to see me) (from how-many days after thou hast come)!

Pha . . . dumba, after . –

Guda mirentha-í pha avzár dumba, then he sped after the horseman (then attack-was-made-by-him for the-horseman after).

Pha . . . .sánga, for the sake of –

Pha jan sánga daf-a dár, keep silent for the woman's sake (for the-woman for mouth (your) hold).

QUESTIONNAIRE

1. What is meant by the preposition-postposition?
Give an example in a sentence
2. What cases are governed by preposition, etc?
3. How would you distinguish the remaining cases?
4. What is meant by inflection in Balochí?
5. How can the postpositions be said to be of more importance than the prepositions?
6. Give a sentence showing the use of chakha?
7. Translate into Balochí, I have no faith in you?
8. Give the English meanings of gwara, láfa, gura, dema?
9. Put into Balochí. He set out after the horseman?
10. Translate into English; Má dah rupíya dátha zahm sánga?

THE CONJUNCTION, INTERJECTION, ETC.

190. Conjunctions and interjections play no very important part in Balochí. There are two conjunctions, dí, also, and haí, or, that are usually found in pairs, speaking grammatically, they should be so used only, eg., naghan dí waragh-ant gozhd dí waragh-ant, they eat bread and meat (bread also they eat meat also they eat), hai e mar hai án mar drogh bandagh-e, either the one or the other is lying (either this man or that man is lying). It may be that one of the two subjects is alluded to, not expressed eg., ráhak dí shutha, the farmer also went, but there must be a reference to someone else already mentioned, other wise dí is inadmissible. The following list includes all the conjunctions that are heard in everyday conversation –

Ar, if, eg., ar na (and) if not

Agh, if

Aghar, if

Agharchi, although (seldom heard)

Án ; eg., án wakhta ki, whenever

Cho eg., cho ma bi, lest it so happen

Chachon ki, as

Chon ki, as

Dí . . dí, both .... And

Dáín ki, until

Dánkho, until

Dánikhara, until

Guda, then, next, on which

Hai ..... hai..either .....cr

Hawe : eg., haw-e sánga ki, in order that

Hare g., har hand-a ki, wherever

Hare g., har phalawa ki, withersoever

Ki, if that, or

Lekin, but (seldom heard)

Mashe, but

Ma, not, used with imperative and contingent future

Na, not, otherwise, else

Na na, neither . . . nor

O, and

Pha e.g., pha hawán, for that reason

INTERJECTIONS

Bale, yes

Bismillah (bi-ismi-alláh), in the name of God

Ballo, well done!

Gind, see! Listen!

Hau, yes

Hon hon, by all means

Inna, no, not at all

O, halloa!

Ped na, not at all, never

Phrr, file!

Sáín, sir!

Sáhib, Sir!

Wáh, well done!

Wázhá, sir!

WORDS AND THEIR WAYS

- Air . . . azmán, the sky, eg., má kapot azmán-a bál gir-ána dítha, I saw a pigeon flying in the air (me-by a-pigeon the-sky-in wing taking was seen).
- Associate Ambráhi khangh, to serve eg., go án mard ambráhi ma khan, do not associated with that man (with that man service not make).
- Ago Kham-e rosh bítha, some time ago (a-few days have passed).
- As bíagh-e wakht-a eg., gardán bíagh-e wakht-a án-hí ma-na thír jatha, he fired at me as he fell (falling becoming-of the-time-at him-by me-to a-bullet was struck). The verb gardán bíagh, to fall, is in the genitive of the infinitive, and reads, at the time falling.
- At is often translated by a case ending only eg., án ásk-ára túfak jan, fire at that deer. The English preposition is denoted by the suffix ára.
- Appears kal bíagh eg., ma-na kal bíagh-e ki gwár-í, it appears to me as if it would rain (me-to information becones that it may rain) kal bíagh, to be informed, hence, to appear.
- Are bíagh-ant, become eg., odha báz khargoshk-án báagh-ant, there are hares in plenty there (there many hares are becoming). Not astán, are, but bíagh-ant. The reason is that hares are generally found there. This distincition should be noted. If you wish to say that a thing exists now, at present moment, and not generally, use ast; but if your meaning be that a thing usually exists, such as a crop, game etc, use bíagh-e. there is the same distinction in Urdú and Hindí hai and hotá hai.

THE SEQUENCE OF WORDS

191. The sequence of the words in the Balochí sentence follows closely the analogy of the most Indian languages. As some hundreds of examples have already been given in this work, little more need be said on the subject. In the affirmative sentence the order of the words is (1) subject (2)object (3)verb eg., án-hí kharká ashkhutha, he heard a sound (him-by a-sound was heard).

In the interrogative sentence the same order obtains eg., thau áń kharká ashkhutha, did you hear that noise (thee-by that noise has been heard)? It is usually the information that denotes whether a question has been asked or an affirmation made.

192. Qualifying words should ordinarily be placed as near the words they qualify as possible and this is true of the subject, object or predicate.

193. If “time” be mentioned it will generally deal in the sentence eg., dánkho ki má nazik na ákhtagh-án án-hár má-ra na ditha, they did not see until we were quite near, similarly in the absence of some words or words denoting “time” any definition of place will lead eg., kham-e dir yak gar dast ákhata, a little further on we came across a pool. So that the general ruling arrived at is 1, time 2, place 3, subject 4, object 5, verb, with all attributes as near the words they quality as possible.

EMPHASIS

194. The place of the negative is immediately before its verb eg., ma gwash, do not speak, ma ra-í do not go. If lowere we wish to emphasized an order the negative many come last as in Urdú and Hindí etc. in the story of the three fools we have tha-ma jhar and tho jher-a mahn, both of which mean, do not quarrel. The first is the ordinary command, the second is emphatic, for heaven’s sake do not wrangle, the man was losing his temper as well as his hair. It should also be noted here that ma has become na when i after the verb.

195. Emphasis is also got by placing dí, even, immediately after a word or by repeating a word eg., ma-í gwara yak bito di n-en, I have not got a single four-anna-piece; narmigha, narmigha gwashta, speak gently, gently does it. This participle di is sometimes used in imitation of Urdú and Hindí bhi, even also, án shutha di, has he gone? I do not believe he has gone. But this construction appears forced.

CHAPTER XVIII

USE OF THE CASES

196. The nominative case may be the subject of any intransitive verb in any tense and any transitive verb also except in the present perfect eg., ahmad sání en, Ahmad is present, ahmad logh-a shutha, Ahmad has gone home, ahmad e rang-a gushagh-e, Ahmad says so, ahmad girjíthiya, Ahmad has been seized.

197. The genitive case corresponds to the English possessive case. It must, therefore, always denote possession, either directly or indirectly eg., dighár tha-ígh en, this land is yours, án wazír topú en, that is the minister's hat. This sense of possession gives it an adjectival meaning as well. When followed by gwara, with and the substantive verb it may translate the English verb "to have" eg., án-hí gwara mál báz ath, he had much property, ma-í gwara hachí n-en, I have nothing

198. It is sometimes used to denote "the price of an article" eg., haw-e mádhin-a chi bhá gir-en, what will you take for this mare? This sentence can also be put haw-e mádhin sánga chi bhá gir-en, without in any way altering the meaning, in both examples mádhin is in the genitive case.

199. The genitive is also used to denote "substance" or "source"; as do hurjin zar-ání, two holsters filled with money (two holsters money-of).

200. A few nominal compounds govern this case eg., án-hí sre-bandí ma khan, do not help him, esh-í nakl khan, copy this.

201. There are a variety of uses to which the dative can be put. Its first and chief function is that of "indirect object".

Ikhtiyar	má-r ikhtiyár en , we are in power
Sudh no knowledge	haw-án-hínra sudh n-en , they have
Gír	esh-íar gír en , does he remember?

203. A sentence may express “necessity” or obligation as resting on a person. In all such cases the noun etc denoting or referring to the person must be put in the dative case and be followed by the gerund in í of the principal verb, which gerund is in turn followed by one of the tenses of bíagh, to be, to become, eg., ní ma-na ravagh-í bí, I must go now, guda wazír-ára nindagh-í bítha, then the minister had to sit down, tha-ra wath-í jar-án chetagh-í bí, you will have to mend your clothes, sharáb hachí ne-y-ath, án-híara áf waragh-í bítha, there being no liquor he had a drink water.

204. What has been called a “dative of reference” is used before a variety of words, nouns, adjectives and verbs. It denotes generally the object with respect to which an affirmation or declaration has been made. The following are a few examples only of its wide use.

Armán sorry	ma-na sahía armán en , I am very
Saughan	ma-na saughan en ki thí bár sharáb ped na war-án , I swear that I shall never touch drink again
Sahrá	guda wazír-ar sahrá bítha ki e ma-í bráth en , it then became evident to the minister that he was his brother.
Der	esh-ánra der der bíagh-e , they are being delayed

Lajj ma-na sakhía gushagh-a azh lajj bíagh-e, I am ashamed at having to say so.

Vesh Ma-na tha-í sar en, I swear by your head, e ma-na sakhía vesh en, I like this very much. Esh-ánra cho bítha, what has happened to them?

205. What may be termed a dative of “advantage” is found before a few words only such as jauán, good, proper, pakar, necessary, síth, profit eg., hacho khanagh tha-ra jauán n-en, it behoves you not to be so ; tha-ra pakar n-en, you do not require it, tha-ra chi síth bí, what will that profit you?

206. There are certain verbs that govern the dative case only deagh, dátha, to give, milagh, miletha, to receive, to meet, tretagh, trettha, to meet, phedh-ágh-ákhta, to appear, man-ágh, man-ákhta, to come, to affect, gwán-janagh, gwán-jatha, to shout, gushagh, guasjta, to say, to tell, mán-khanánagh, mán-khutha, to apply eg., wath-í chham-ánra mán-khanán-í, I will apply to it my eyes, dasagh, dasitha, to point out (indirect), josh-ágh, josh-ákhta, to boil eg., áf-a josh ákhta, the water boiled. The verb khafagh, to fall, is sometimes found with this case eg., kal haw-án wakht-a khapta wazír-ar ki bádsháh murtho shutha, it was only then the minister came to hear that the kong was dead.

207. Sentences conveying the sense of “to swear”, “to vow”, always take the dative of the person concerned eg., ma-na tha-í sar en, I swear to you, I swear by your head (me-to thee-of the-head is).

208. The accusative is used as the direct object of all transitive its suffixes are generally those of the dative, there are hardly ever be any doubt as to which case is intended, ma ramagh-ar áf deagh-án, I am watering the goats, duz-ar jan, strike the thief, án-híá tha-ra jatha, did he strike you?

209. With an agentive case before a present perfect tense of a transitive verb the suffix a is not used with the accusative. When necessary, for the sake of clearness or emphasis, ar, ár, etc, may be used.

210. The locative case is generally reserved to denote time and place. The preposition that oftenest precede it are ma, in, and pha, on. When a point of time is expressed the preposition may be, and usually is, omitted eg., án-hí miragh-a rosh-a, on the day of his death. With a longer period of time the preposition is necessary eg., ma-án rosh-án, in these days.

211. The agentive has only one use. It supplements and completes the office of the nominative case before the present perfect tense of transitive verbs eg., thaf-á ma-na gipta, I have caught fever (fever-by me has been caught). It has no other function in the language.

212. The ablative is used whenever comparison is made between two or more objects eg., egalo azh hama galo-án phráh en, this is the widest door.

213. It may be used to denote “direction from” eg., azh ma-í phalawa sahib-ar salám de, give the gentleman my compliments, “time” eg., azh báz rosh gwar má ákhta, it is a long time since he came to see me, “source”, eg., azh haw-án cháth áf waragh-ún, we drink water from that well, cause eg., azh hair-a hark has bhágía bítha, on account of peace everyone has become prosperous, ability eg., azh má phur na bítha, we could not fill it.

214. When preceded by the preposition go it may be used to denote “position” eg., go khas-e-a túfak bí, if any one have gun, and sometimes even an “indirect object”, eg., ráhok-á dáh khvtha go bádsháh-a, the farmer complained to the king, mádhin-ar go kha-ía shutha-í, to whom did he sell the mare. Such forms as árámi-a, with ease, easily, ashtáfí-á, with celerity, quickly, are ablative cases with the prepositions go and azh suppressed.

215. A few verbs denoting ‘fearing’ asking, ‘enquiring etc govern this case eg., ma azh án-hí thursagh-án, I am afraid of him, azh avzár-a phol khan, ask the horseman; azh bádsháh-a pharsen-án, I shall enquire from the king.

RULES OF CONSTRUCTION AND SYNTAX

216. The rules given below are of general application only, and amount to a summary of what has already been said. There is authority for all of them, but there are exceptions also to all of them, or to nearly all of them. They will be of value to the student only when he has mastered the whole scheme of the language, as a place of already reference, and as an aid to memory, until this has been accomplished he will find them meaningless.

THE ALPHABET

Rule- I – The letter n when preceded by one of the long vowels is generally nasan as ín, this, án, that.

Rule II – A final nasal n when followed by a word beginning with a vowel loses its nasality as, de-án-í, I will give it, khan-án-í, I will do it.

Rule III – The sound of the letter e is generally what of ay in the word “day”, never that of e in the word “me” as, mard-e, a certain man, khas-e-á, by a certain person.

Rule IV – The letter e when used in the 2nd person singular of the imperative is sounded as áe, or nearly as the letter y in the word of “my”, as, de, give.

THE ARTICLES

Rule V – The indefinite article is represented by the numeral adjective yá, yak, one or by the suffix e, or both as fakir, beggar, yá fakir, a beggar, yá fakir-e, a certain beggar.

Rule VI – The force of the English definite article is obtained by placing the demonstrative pronouns e, this and án, that, in their emphatic forms haw-e and haw-án, before the noun as, zál, a woman, haw-e zál, this woman, the woman, mard, a man, haw-án mard, that man, the man.

GENDER

Rule VII – Where separate words do not exist the gender of nouns the names of animals is determined by placing the words nar, male, mádhagh, female, before them as, rophask, a fox, nar-e rophask, a male fox, mádhagha-e rophask, a female fox.

NOUNS

Rule VIII – The plural of nouns is formed by adding án to the nominative case singular, and less frequently by adding gal as, mard, a man, mard-án, men, duz, a thief, duz-gal, thieves.

Rule IX – The genitive case in a and e, as well as that form of it which remains without a suffix, precedes the qualifying noun, but the genitive in egh, egha, ígh, follows the governing noun and is used predicatively as uazír topú, the minister a hat, e mál sarkár-egh en, this is government property.

Rule X – That form of the accusative case which ends in the affixed short a should be used when the agentive case in long á is in such a sentence one of the suffixes ar, ár, ára, ra should be used with the subject if it be necessary to render that object particular or emphatic, otherwise it may be left unchanged as, má mard-ar jatha, I struck the man, or má mard jatha, I struck a man, but not má mard-a jatha.

Rule XI – The agentive case is used only before the present perfect tense of transitive verbs as, duz-á ma-na na jatha, the thief did not strike me.

THE ADJECTIVE

Rule XII – Adjectives generally precede the nouns they qualify, except when for any reason they are used predicatively: as jathagh-e mál, stolen property, sakhía jawán en, it is very good.

Rule XIII – When two objects are compared, that with which the comparison is made is put in the ablative case as, ahmad azh mohan mazann en, Ahmad is older than Mohan.

Rule XIV – The superlative degree is expressed by placing hama, all, or some word of similar meaning, before the ablative case of the noun with which comparison is made as ahmad azh hama chhorav-án mazann en, Ahmed is the biggest boy, or Ahmad is the oldest boy.

THE NUMERALS

Rule XV – The ordinals are formed from the cardinals by the addition of the syllable mí, less often by addition of wí, as nuh, nine, nuh-mí, ninth.

Rule XVI – Multiples denoting “fold” as formed by placing yak-e before the cardinals, or by adding sar as yak-e chíár, fourfold; sai sar, threefold.

THE PRONOUN

Rule XVII – That form of the genitive case of pronouns that ends in ígh, egh, is generally used predicatively as, án túfak kha-ígh en, whose is that gun?

Rule XVIII – The pronouns of the 3rd person are represented by the demonstratives e, this, and án, that as, esh-í topú, her hat, án-hí túfak, his gun.

Rule XIX – The pronouns e, this and án, that, when used as demonstratives are indeclinable as án wakht-a, at that time, haw-e mard zahm, that man's sword.

Rule XX – Whenever in a sentence a possessive pronoun refers back to the subject of that sentence it is translated by wath-ías, wath-í túfak dátha-í, he gave his gun, he gave his gun.

THE VERB

Rule XXI – The root or base of any verb can be derived from its infinitive by dropping the syllable agh, as khanagh, to do, root khan, deagh, to give, root de.

Rule XXII – The contingent future and absolute future tenses are made up of the root and the present imperfect tense of the substantive verb as, khan-án, I may do, I shall do, from the root khan, thar-án, I may return, from the root thar.

Rule XXIII – The present imperfect tense consists of the infinitive of any verb followed by the present imperfect tense of the substantive verb as, ravagh-án, I am going, from ravagh, to go.

Rule XXIV – The past imperfect of any verb is made up of its infinitive and the past imperfect of the substantive verb as, ravagh-ethán, I was going, from ravagh, to go.

Rule XXV – The present perfect tense of an intransitive verb is made up of its past participle in its adjectival form and the present imperfect of the substantive verb as, murthagh-án, I have died, from miragh, to die, past participle adjectival form murthagh.

Rule XXVI – The present perfect tense of a transitive verb is formed in the same way as that of an intransitive, but is used in the 3rd person singular, if the object be singular the verb will be in the singular, if the object be plural and followed by one of the suffixes of the accusative case the verb may still be in the singular, but if the object be plural and in the nominative form, that is without any suffix, the verb should be in the plural as má mard jatha, I struck the man, má mard-ánra jatha, I struck the men; má mard-án jathagh-ant, I struck the men.

Rule XXVII – The past perfect tense of any verb can be formed by adding the past imperfect tense of the substantive verb to the adjectival form of its past participle as nishtagh-ethán, I was sitting, from nindagh, to sit, past participle adjectival form, nishtagh.

Rule XXVIII – The root and the 2nd person singular of the imperative of all verbs are the same, the 2nd person plural of the imperative is formed by adding eth to this root as, jan, strike thou jan-eth, strike you, from janagh, to strike, root jan.

Rule XXIX – The present participle active is formed by adding ána to the root of any verb, and the present participle passive by changing the final short vowel a of the past participle into iya as khan-ána, doing, from khanagh, to do, root khan; dokhtiya, sewn, from doshagh, to sew, past participle, dokhta

Rule XXX – The conjunctive participle of any verb can be got by changing the final short vowel a of its past participle into o as mutho, having died, from murtha, died.

Rule XXXI – The noun of an agency of any verb can be formed by adding okh to its root as khan-okh, the doer, from khanagh, to do, root khan.

Rule XXXII – The passive infinitive of a transitive verb is the root of its active infinitive with í-jagh, added, as, janíjagh, to be struck, from janagh, to strike, root jan.

IDIOMS

217. There are many words in Balochí which, when combined with pthers, with nouns, prepositions and postpositons, lose or change their original meaning a bewildering manner. This is not a trait peculiar to Balochí, of course, it prevails in all Oriental languages, in some more than others. These stranges combinations are the idioms of these languages, and may be justly called the despair of the foreigner. Some of them appear at first sight to convey untruths when measured by reason and logic. In the East your servant is said "to eat" his food, he is told occasionally that he will "eat" stick should be too long over it, when he returns he may confidentially tell you that his chief has just "eaten" defeat somewhere on the frontier. In Balochí a man is said to tell (khanagh) a story, you may have to ask someone to keep (khanagh) silent, you may wish to know if the chief before you will have (khanagh) someone as servant; you may solicit the older stranger near you to hold (khanagh) your sword, he may in a slack moment lose (khanagh) it or still more likely make away (khanagh) with it, he will then of a surety put (khanagh) the blame on his brother, he may later be taken ill, and you may with kindly intention ask him to take (khanagh) some medicine, he may some day hop (khanagh) before you on lieg, when out of curiosity if not out of real sympathy you may wish to know why he goes (khanagh) lame, and finally, when you are both tired of questioning and answering, you may good naturedly ask him please (khanagh) himself. In short, the Balochí khanagh, to do, to make, out-functions many times over our own servile and simple Saxon "make", there are two other important verbs that enter largely into idiomatic constructions in Balochí, janagh, to strike, and waragh, to eat. Three are others, of course, but these easily take first place.

Not all the sentences given below contain an idiom, but they all do cover a difficulty of one kind or another.

Obs 1 It is just these surprisingly constructions or idioms as we are pleased to call them, that make all the difference when speaking, they constitute the true key to a language and to the heart of a people speaking it. The short idiom of a language is the history of a people. each phrase, each short sentence, each quaint saying, has its own story to tell, and very often bears the impress of untold centuries.

Obs 2 You cannot help thinking in a language once you come to know idioms, you know a language only when you can and do think in it.

16. Baloch nariyán – ání chakha savár na bíagh-án, án-hán

Obs 1 Khushi-jíthiya, was killed, is, of course, the passive voice Dames has khushtiyeth.

Obs 2 We use chíár-umí, the fourth, because the other three have already been mentioned. Here thí is in admissible. The Baloch sentence is a compound one, he farms (and) he helps me.

Obs 3 The idiom is lorhá deagh, to give a hedge

Obs 4 Mostly jawár and some wheat, this slight change makes the Baloch sentence less bald.

Obs 5 The verb udalagh, to carry off, is generally found followed by baragh. The two verbs then go to make up an intensive compound, to carry clean away. The verb udalagh, however, is restricted in use, and for most part refers to the carrying away of females.

Obs 6 the local authority in a tuman is the tumandár, and failing that gentleman, the Mukaddin. The Sindhi wadero is not in general use.

Obs 7 To impose a fine is chati bandagh, note also the verb shar' gieshagh, to do justice, hence, try a culprit. It takes the genitive. The participle dí, also, is not used here, he was tried, he was imprisoned, he was fined, three actions, you can use dí in the case of two actions only

Obs 8 The abductor is called síyáh-kárí, doer of dark deeds, and the abducted woman, udaliye, Zítha-ish, they took by force, by them taken forcibly. The verb zinagh, always implies force

Obs 9 Read, She was got from a mare of my own (and) and Government stallion, Esh-í máth sara sarkári sán khapta, a Government stallion covered her mother.

Obs 10 Note how the verb “won” has been translated the defeated party has been put in the ablative preceded by azh. Then follows the verb dar-khafagh, to come out. The dí, also justified because a previous relative statement has been made.

Obs 11 the plural Baloch-án is not required, the plural verb sufficing to show all that is required, Zavár or avzár mounted khan-ant is the 3rd person plural of the contingent future. This tense among its other uses denotes “habit”, “custom”, “usage”.

Obs 1 Everyone raises a band etc, the meaning is that they do this frequently, frequency of action demands the contingent future, and this we have in zir-í jath and kh-ár-í

Obs 2 Not chi kár but chi chi, kár, because there are more than one

Obs 3 Hundi khanagh, to hold on to something, to keeo in one's care for a short time only. For a longer period we have dáragh, er-khanagh, etc.

Obs 4 yá or but ki is in more general use.

Obs 5 Hál, circumstance, news, is often treated as a plural. The Arabic broken plural ahwál is not often heard.

Obs 6 Bawar, pat, itibar, all mean "confidence" "trust" and all require the postposition chakha, on Án-hí chakha bawar ma khan, do not trust him.

Obs 7 Read, the child is wanting now ot me milk give. Not only words used but thoughts also thus put in the direct form.

Obs 8 The translation is. Let us make some races

Obs 9 The prelix azh governs the verbal noun deagh, which is here in the ablative. From the not giving of bread, or thorough the not giving of bread.

Obs 10 nem or nemagh, a half. It is nemagh in the north and nem in the south. 6-4-1908

Obs 1 Dambíro, or dambirav, the Baloch guitar or banjo

Obs 2 Mihrwánaghi, in the north, mihrwání in the south. One is inclined to write mihrwání khutha, having shown kindness, after the analogy of the Urdú idiom. But it would be incorrect.

Obs 3 Mál maueshi, cattle (of all kinds) generic term.

Obs 4 Read, if they take any knowledge, then they take it from seeing the circumstances of their parents).

Obs 5 Harkat khanagh, to performed an ill act, to act
the fool, Harkat means “movement”. In Urdú harkat na
kar means “do not move”, “keep still”.

Obs 6 Jirgah, being a collective noun, takes its verb
gíeshagh, to decide a qurral, in the singular.

Obs 7 Phutare and gadare are generally confined to this meaning of “pure” and “corrupt” as regards language.

Obs 8 Or likainagh-e hálwar, hálwar, hawar, habar, have much the same meaning, but it is always well to vary the wording when this can be done.

Obs 9 phastha or gaptha, from gapagh, to be stuck in a bog or quicksand

Obs 10 khawinjar in the north and kapinjar in south,
Milagh, to meet, receive, governs the dative.

Obs 1 The sentence has been changed to read “But my intention is to keep them till the fair,” etc “I can’t get a better price” become to me more price will come.

Obs 2 Man-áragh-e, he is bringing towards that is the force of the prefix man.

Obs 3 Tumandár-e, of the tumandar, is the genitive case of shashtátha-í or shashta-í, sent by him.

Obs 4 Zen khanagh or sanj khanagh, to saddle, chakha, on, is often omitted.

Obs 5 The word rosh refers to a gall on the back of an animal, so that further and particular detail is unnecessary.

Obs 6 From which it will be noted that the verb phedhágh, to appear, to governs the dative case.

Obs 7. Instead of taking service has to be changed to why not take service (why service not you are doing)?

Obs 8 Báz báz, again again, often vash, wash, happy, is one of several words that require the dative case.

Obs 9 “Clean clothes” become shushtagh-e jar-án, washed clothes. The infinitive is shudhagh. A variant to kadaha kadaha, sometimes, now and then, is dame. Note the idiomatic form khanagh-í biagh – e have to work.

Obs 10 Change you must give up such thoughts “to” you should not make thoughts of this kind” Such verbal expressions as khanagh-í bí ravagh-í bi etc, are always preceded by the dative case.

Obs 11 For gushagh-ant, they say, it is said, we very often hear gushante.

Obs 12 The word for “a raid” is pásná. In taking the genitival suffix ání the final vowel is discarded. Mokal, leisure, is preceded by the dative shuthagh-ant or shuthant.

Obs 13 Shutha-na bitha, went became not, is the 3rd person singular present perfect, of the intransitive potential compound shutha, biagh, to be able to go. Note the idiom “to miss” thír-radh bitha, the bullet a failure became.

Obs 14 Jherav, a row, a quarrel, galgal, a noise, an uproar, hon-bair, a blood-feud.

Obs 15 The exact words of the order have to be repeated. You a second time, your flocks of goats and sheep, in fatlar, do not graze.

 one camel. buz-án, yak sadh
senzdah mesh-án,
yak-e lerav shwashk- án (9).

Obs 1 The verb to use here is khafagh, to fall. It generally conveys the meaning of something sudden or inadvertent. Neither shutha nor rapta would give the required sense here.

Obs 2 Rahim-a be-y-ár, bring rahim, are supposed to be the exact words used

Obs 3 The Baloch seldom makes any distinction when addressing superiors or inferiors. In this he resembles his brother the Pathan. He considers thau, thou, equally applicable to master and man, and equally suitable.

Obs 4 Án-hí chakha ma-í tawakkul en, on him is my dependence, in Him is my hope.

Obs 5 Chi azh báz-a etc or ki azh báh-a. other words for canal are jo and nahar.

Obs 6 One is included to use the conjunctive participle in such sentences, but it would be incorrect.

Obs 7 B-an, I shall be. All that is left of biagh, to become, is the letter b.

Obs 8 Ma-na ma de, do not give (it) to me. The object is gozhd. Remember that the correct pronunciation of de, give, is nearly that of dáe when slurred and with the d very soft.

Obs 9 nouns when placed by numerals are usually kept in the singular form. 13-4-1907.

26. Why has he to come? 25. Má chákur-ára gwashta thau maroshi núr báh-a sání bí, ma hamodha rav-án. (10)
27. Sir, his cousin was not well. 26. Án pha chi na ákhta?
27. Wázhá án-hí nákhosákht ná-duráh ath.

Obs 1 Man-ágh-ethún, we were coming, is the 1st person plural past imperfect tense. The numeral dah, ten, keeps the noun and its verb in the singular, phadeagh is transitive.

Obs 2 The postposition níánuan, in among, is not always preceded by the genitival suffixes a of the singular and ant of the plural likhiy-ant, for hilithy-ant, hidden.

Obs 3 Note this peculiar use of khas, khas-e duz-ant, some thieves burth-ant or burthagh-ant, carried off.

Obs 4 The pronoun does not require to be repeated before namigh.

Obs 5 Logh man-agh-ethún, I was coming home, is the past imperfect tense. Yak dihav dithom, one leopard was seen by me. The short vowel of the past participle has become o before m, the pronominal suffix of the 1st person. This is from the Multani.

Obs 6 Otigh or oti, a made tank, dor, a natural pond or pool which fills during the rain and later dries up, gar, a natural pond or pool which remains more or less full throughout the year, dhand, a lake, kumb, a hollow in a rock which may or not may contain water

Obs 7 the four cardinal points are –

Ubla phalawa, the north

Lamma phalawa, the south

Burzi phalawa, the west

Jahli phalawa, the east.

The vowel a immediately following the letter l in the word phalawa is very lightly pronounced by some no at all. Astán, are, because we are repeating what the cousin is supposed to have said.

Obs 8 Kithán, in a measure corresponds to kahrá in Punjabi, to kaunsa in urdu and hindi, and to kahiro in Sindhi. It is used only where there is a sense of section or differentiation.

Obs 9 The compound chukh-chori corresponds to the Urdu bál-bachhe, and means small children of either sex. Gregh, to weep, is generally treated as a transitive verb, and takes the agentive case before the present perfect tense.

Obs 10 What he said to Chakur was. Be present to-day at the Núr canal, I shall go there. 5-4-1909.

25. Ní ma lotagh-án daryá nazí chí-e dighár ki wath-í mehman-ánra naghan de-án.

Obs 1 Azh binglún-a bitho, corresponds exactly to the Urdu idiom in which huke takes the place of bitho.

Obs 2 Hathiyar bandagh, to arm, to fasten on weapons. Much biagh, to collect to assemble.

Obs 3 Or. Ma sal hia be-sekh-ún

Obs 4. Án-hí nianwan, in it. In the case of the pronouns the genitival suffixes are seldom omitted before the postpositions. From tha-ra onwards the supposedly exact words of the order are repeated. Khard khard khanagh, to disperse.

Obs 5 For “I will investigate”, say “I will hear”, kh-ash khun-án. It is well to note here that suffix kh is not generally used before the perfect tenses of verbs that begin with a vowel oshtátha, stood, not kh-oshtátha.

Obs 6 Likthiy-en, is hidden, for likthiya-en.

Obs 7 Gama gáma juzagh, to step slowly, as if counting one's steps.

Obs 8 The small word b-en is the 2nd person singular, contingent future, or bíagh, to become. It should be pronounced as if written b-áe (Cf de, dáe)

Obs 9 Note the use of the ablative case in this construction

Obs 10 Rav-ána, rav-ána, going along, is the játe játe of the Urdu and Hindi

Obs 11 Nishtiy-en is for nishtiya-en, is seated

Obs 12 Philav-a wakh-t-a ákhta gives the English meaning. The question gwas ákhta was it sufficient? Did enough come? Adds emphasis.

Obs 13 What di the think? This probably the canal water will reach my land from the new manka. And it is this we have to put into Balochí. it was a thought thoughts contain doubts, so that we come to use the contingent future tense, kh-á-íth, it may come, and ne-y-a-íth, it may not come. 23-10-1906.

Obs 1 As alternatives we have shakk and khesi, Gawín in coined from the Pehlavi gumán.

Obs 2 Kushtathant, they used to be killed, is the 3rd person plural, contingent perfect, of khushagh, to kill

Obs 3 Gieshagh-án, they settle, diagh-ant, they give, very often deagh-aint is heard, Iwaz, compensation, iwazi, revenge, a person acting for another.

Obs 4 Azh csh-án, out of these, that is, out of the twelve hundred rupees. The chi-e can be repeated before rok, but it is not necessary

Obs 5 I saw “the news-giving wire is cut”. Tar is the common word for a telegram.

Obs 6 Paidaish-a, on the produce, guzrán khanagh-án is understood after it.

Obs 7 Zamín-chand, or dighár-chand, earth shaker, earthquake, chandenagh, to shake.

Obs 8. A variant would be gharq bitha.

Obs 9 We need not to use the plural here. The Tarens are considered collectively.

Obs 10 The singular dubetha would not be incorrect, and is often heard after chi-e maddi-bunagh, baggage, but especially military baggage.

Obs 11. The particular di here means “even”.

Obs 12 Áragh-í bi, has to be brought, that is, by this inhabitants Remember, this form takes the dative, have the dative is understood.

Obs 13 We must use the contingent future kh-á-y-ant, that may come, that may chance to come. The singular of both verbs could have been used, kh-á-ith and biagh-e. We often hear a form ending in e used khan-ante, they may do, kh-á-y-ante, they may come, bante, they become, etc.

Obs 14 To approve seb khanagh, sebal, wholesome, suitable. In the next sentence we meet with vash khanagh, a like, to approve.

Obs 15 Khuh, a well, is common. An alternative is chath, mil-í, may be next sentence may be had the contingent future, 3rd person singular, Mashe chi-e sar-en, but it is somewhat brackish.

Obs 16 Ubhár, a rising, swelling, a flood, from the Hindi. We have an alteranative word in por, Bhorenth-í, was broken by it, that is, by the ubhar or flood.

Obs 17 Wabá or wahába, cholera, sohrakh, measless, gurphagh, small-pox.

Obs 18. Renv, grass, stubble, straw, is here considered plural, and is therefore replaced by the pronoun án-hán, they. 2-11-1909

Obs 1 Mil-í preference to milagh-e, because it is a custom. See also girt in the next sentence, and khat in the third.

Obs 2 Thith, date, from the Hindi tithi or tith. Siyád, a kinsman shashtagh-án, they send, that is, the folk concerned with the marriage send.

Obs 3 Darmán, gunpowder, medicine

Obs 4 Note that it is the cardinal numbers that are used in this sense, not the ordinals, as one might suppose. For havaldar the Urdu 'uhdadár' may be used.

Obs 5 Chiretta áf, water of chiretta. And similiary for any other infusion.

Obs 6 The exact words of the order must be translated.

Obs 7 To make it more pleasant to the ear the Baloch would perhaps say jawá-e-n shiuára-e-n. put the question thus. Are there good men?

Obs 8 Uspust, ispust, Lucerne, bho, bhoosa, or chopped straw, reni, grass of any kind.

Obs 9 Other common word for pay are pagár and talab.

Obs 10 Zinagh means to take by force, and should, therefore, only be used when this implied or expressed.

Obs 11 Zuma-shaf or khamis, Thursday

Obs 12 The singular burtha can be used after the numerals

Obs 13 Gushante, it is said, gumatti khashtagh-e, outlawed gumattis, Sistan, border, are all words worth remembering

Obs 14 Or, án mazar rand-án gindagh-e, he sees traces of tiger

Obs 15 Ráhzan, a highwayman, go ráhzani-a, desperately, after the dare-devil fashion of a highwayman.

Obs 16 Har do tuman-í, of both tumans. We might put the whole sentence more idiomatically. Hardo tuman báz mardum kár-a man-ákhtagh-án, of both tumans many men came into use. Compare this with Urdu idiom kám-ána, khet áná.

Obs 17. Chilav, zamistán, zimistán, gwahara, the cold season, madhagh, mastha, to freeze, bawar shanz janagh, to snow.

Obs 18 Wárh na khangh-ant, they are unable to eat them.

Obs 19 Bithen, milethen, saheten, are examples of the contingent perfect.

Obs 20 Jalo, jalav, jasol, an attack, pásna, an attack by day; máreshagh, an attack by night. Read we shall make a night attack on Sapri.

Obs 21 Chí-e horgh-e hastal wath-í gura er-khan, keep some empty mules with you.

Obs 22 Or, to put it more idiomatically, dujon din a dukhagh-e. Dukhagh, to smoke (as a chimney). 27-4-1909

Obs 1 Change the to “I have heard”, “by me it has been heard”

Obs 2 Ravante, or rav-ánt, or ba-rav-ant. The first form is much affected in the south.

Obs 3 's-ham-edha, from here, is from here, is azh or azh ham-edha, to go back.

Obs 4 Tharagh, to return, ravagh, to go, tharagh-ravagh, to go back.

Obs 5 We may dispense with the postposition by writing Hindustán-a. the same idiom obtains in several Easter languages. To you India came how many years have passed? The point to rememeber is that the expression requires the dative of the person concern.

Obs 6 In the East “to marry” is “to make marriage”.

Obs 7 This may be put differently. I saw a Baloch, with him are ten mares and twenty sheeps. The verb in this case would be astán. So far has direct narration gone.

Obs 8 Ninjen, ninjin, own. It is coined from the Hindi nij, the band consists of an embankment round a field or plot. No date.

65. Ba-rau, án-híára dara chikh.

Obs 1 or khushtagh-án, but the singular is more in accordance with Baloch idiom.

Obs 2 Barát, an allowance, a subsidy, barát-wár, the receiver of such allowance. Other common words are nazar, inám, bashkish. A wedding present is called nendr.

Obs 3 From the Arabic al-qádir, the Almighty, Hudhá, God, may be used instead.

Obs 4 Sawáarak or sawárik, breakfast, whard, food in general, naghán, bread, food, sham, evening meal. Men from the north call both meals sawáarak, and pronounce it sawárigh.

Obs 5. Otak khagh, to encamp. But we might have used nishtagh-án

Obs 6 Bár, take away, for bar, from baragh, the contingent future, 3rd person singular is bárt. We cannot here use the conjunctive participle burtho, having taken (them) away (kill them)

Obs 7 Khoh, koh, a mountain, a stone, ther, a mountain peak, a hill, nighwar, low hills, Kohistan, a hilly country, gwásh, foot-hills

Obs 8 Wájh wajah, waj, Muhlat and naubat are also in use.

Obs 9 Bale, in fact, it translates in this sense the Urdu balks (Arabic ba + Persian ki), and this very probably may be its origin.

Obs 10 Máh-e, of the month, genitive case

Obs 11 Man-igh or ma-igh, mine. The suffix n is euphonic

Obs 12 Phajia-kh-ár-í, the contingent future is preferable to phajia-áragh-e, the present imperfect, to be recognized by everyone” has a sense of habitualness.

Obs 13 Er’ga, in this way, ár’ga, in that way, are shortened forms of e-rang-a and á-rang-a.

Obs 14 Azh ch-án-hia phursitha, I asked him, is an every-day form of expression, in which the ch is an abbreviated form of chi. The only excuse for its presence appears to be euphony, Hairát, welfare, happiness, from the Arabic khairiyat.

Obs 15. Kh-á-ith or kh-á-e, may come

Obs 16 wa pha wath-án, among themselves, it is a phrase worth remembering.

Obs 17 Note the idiom, he has come to his food.

Obs 18. Nawán án-hía gir-án, perhaps him I may catch, the inference being, perhaps him I may not catch.

Obs 19 Bandagh-í en denotes present obligation, and bandagh-í bi, future obligations

Obs 20 Azh guzagh-a or guzagh-a wakhta, at the time of passing, while passing

Obs 21 Bithen and kh-árt are examples of the contingent perfect tense. The pronominal suffix í, him, may be left out without obscuring the sense, but the idiom is to have it there.

Obs 22 Jarenokh, about to make, bíokh, possible, ná-bíokh impossible

Obs 23 Khushij-en, you may get killed, is the 2nd person singular contingent future, passive voice. Pronounce the word as if written khusijáe. 7.11-1908

PASSAGES THAT HAVE BEEN SET
EXAMINATIONS, WITH TRANSLATIONS AND NOTES.

UNSEEN PASSAGES

The following “unseen” have been set at various examinations held at Quetta and Dera Ghází Khán: the dates are given where known. No changes have been made in them, grammatical or otherwise. As tests in a European language they are of little real value; as tests of one’s knowledge of Balochí they can hardly be improved. The Baloch is a very plain, human person, whose ideas are simple in the extreme, and wants few. From early boyhood to late old age his conceits are of hunting, fighting, thieving, and of the inevitable zál. The worries of the outside world trouble him not at all. Lucky Baloch! O beata solitude! O sola beatitude!

stony that the camels found great difficulty in getting along. In fact, two out of the eight lay down by the side of the road and refused to move another step. There was no help for it but to leave them in charge of one of the camel drivers with orders to let them rest, and then to follow us in two or three hours. This was about 2.30 in the afternoon, so we calculated that they ought to reach camp before midnight. We then pushed on with the remainder of the camels and mules and arrived at our halting place just before six o'clock. The rain had now ceased, but there was a heavy mist over the camping ground. We found to our dismay that the only water anywhere near was so salt that we could not water the baggage animals. Fortunately we had a small supply of fresh water left, which we made tea, and after supper we turned in to sleep.

Obs 1 Dying and dying out came, just escaped dying, nearly died. The idiom is one worth remembering (Cf Urdu and Hindi)

Obs 2 Jukagh, juktha, to rest, to lie down, has reference to animals only

Obs 3 Read Made “on” to going one more step, or, as we say, refused to budgo another step, a useful idiom

Obs 4 The exact wording of the order has to be translated

Obs 5 Dighár wakht-a kham-e phesha, a little before six o'clock in the evening. The Baloch division of time is a small study in itself.

Obs 6 Dera-a chíár-e chand a chakha er-khapta, had settled down all round and above the camp.

Obs 7 Or, azh phol-phurs khanagh-a

Obs 8 Thus ikhtar comes to refer to (a) number, (b) quantity, (c) degree

Obs 9 Note the distinction. Nokh-e áf, fresh water, but zaghar-e shir, fresh milk. 1-4-1909

Two men came along with forty goats, and told me Khar the night before and were going on to Dera Ghazi Khan to sell the animals. There was a pool of water below, where they drank. All the wheat has been reaped and jawar will be sown. Grass was very plentiful the animals will be fat. There is now no fear of thieves, and we are well and content. Now I will go back to my village, as my wife is ill.

Obs 1 There are two verbs very much alike, dinagh, dirtha, to tear, and deragh, dirtha, to be torn. It is the intransitive verb that is used here.

Obs 2 Or khoh er-gwáth, on the lee side of the rock

Obs 3 Remember that nindagh has two distinct meanings. (1) to sit (2) to dwell

Obs 4 Got some wood from a tree near by and made a fire, is equal to, there was a tree near by, from it having gathered some wood, I lit a fire

Obs 5 Banda or bandagh is a good substitute for mar, mard, mardum

Obs 6 Runijitiya, has been reaped, the passive voice, from runagh, runitha

Obs 7 Khishiji, will be sown, the passive voice, from khishagh, khishta, to cultivate

Obs 8 Astán, were, because renv, grass, has been considered a plural noun. No date.

A caravan on its way to Khurssán was once attacked and captured by a party of Baloches. While the robbers were dividing their spoil they were assailed by a troop of Muhgal horsemen that had gone out to escort the caravan. Fortune at once deserted the robbers, they were over-powered, many were killed, and the reminder became prisoners. Among the wounded Baloches was a man named Hasan who had a very fine mare which also fell into the hands of the Mughals. As Hasan lay

Said Hasan "what will become of you? They will shut up in the close and unwholesome stable of the Hakim. Go back to the tent of your master and tell my wife that she will never see her husband again"

Thus speaking, Hasan gnawed away the thong tied round his mare's feet and freed her when the mare saw her wounded master at her feet, she bent her head and, grasping with her teeth the leathern girdle round his waist, went off with him at full gallop. She thus bore him over many a mountain and

Last year some Sheram Pathans came into our Kaisarání country. It was supposed that they intended to loot the Hindoos of Veho First of all, three men of the Zhob levies robbed a Hindoo munshi who was travelling to Zhob. They had hardly finished robbing him when a sawár of the border police came along. As the men were then doing nothing the sawár supposed they were on leave, coming down from the Pathan country. He accordingly rode up to them unsuspectingly and exchanged greetings. They at once pulled him off his horse, robbed him of his carbine, and threatened to

Last year the Marris collected a band to raid the Bugtis in order to avenge the murder of one of their men and to recover some goats and camels which the Bugtis had carried off. They arranged to meet at the pass early in the morning, and having rested there till evening, to make a night attack on the Bugtis camp. But some Bugtis spies learnt of this and went and informed their Sardar. The Sardar held a meeting of the headmen. After discussing the matter, they ordered that all the Bugtis women and children should drive the flocks and herds into the southern hills, and that the men should stay to fight the enemy. On the road from Harrand to Kakhas you pass several historic places. First there is Tobav, where there are several good perennial springs, and which is the first place Dosten reached in the flight along the Chachar pass from Harrand, as related in the famous poem of Dosten Shiren, and where his grey mare died under him.

Next there is Bhura Phusht, where his bay horse died. Then they will show you a cairn called Changal Khushtak about which the story is as follows. A Gurchani Baloch called Changal used to go by arrangement with certain jats of Harrand to

In the month of Har, Ali Han, son of Nokhaf Ali Khan, came to Harrand one evening. The chief happened to be in Harrand that day. Ali Han went to him and said "Sir, the night before last a band of twenty Bugtis attacked our village, wounded six men, of whom two are dead, and drove off twelve camels, five bullocks, three cows, and twenty sheep. Ten of our men went off in pursuit, and my father sent me to inform you. All else is well"

The chief ordered a horseman to gallop to Drigri and send the border police in pursuit. Ten horsemen left the post at once, and taking the road through the Chachar Pass reached Kalchas early in the morning. There they watered and fed their mares, and taking five more sawars went to the west to look for the tracks of the raiders. At mid-day they found the tracks, and followed them south as far as the Bugti border. They then turned back and passed the night as the gusets of Nodho in his village. Next morning some Alkanis arrived bring with them the cows and bullocks which Bugtis had stolen. They told the sarwars that they had followed the raiders and kept them attacking them, but were repulsed many times. At last, during the night, when the raiders were asleep, they crept up quietly, and killed the sentry and drove the cattle off into the hills before the raiders could attack them. Owing to the darkness they escaped.

The Baloch custom of giving and taking of the hal is also rigidly enforced, and the procedure is adhered to strictly in accordance with the order of precedence. The murder of a member of one tribe by the member of another tribe must in theory always be avenged by the murdered man's relations. Of recent years, however these inter-tribal cases are usually settled by the shahi jirgas at Sibi and Fort Munro and compensation in money and kind is awarded to the heirs of the murdered man. In fighting the Baloch tactics were comprised in the simple principle that an attack was never to be made unless the enemy could be surprised or was inferior in numbers. Battle once given, the fight was carried on hand-to-hand with sword and shield, and not as is the case with the Pathans, by a desultory matchlock fire at long ranges. It was not often that the Baloches met each other in fight tribe to tribe. The ordinary rule was for small parties to go out on a marauding expedition. These parties were called chapaos, and their object was to murder and plunder only those enemies whom they could surprise. The members of a chapao travelled long distances by night and lay concealed during the day, and it was for this reason they always rode mares, as a mare is easily tied up and less likely to betray her master than a horse. Their larger and distant expeditions were also usually made on horseback and consisted of from two to three hundred men. In a raid of this description the best cattle were driven rapidly off under strong guard, the weaker and worthless were kept in the rear with the man body and if hard pressed, a few were allowed to drop behind from time to time in order to delay the pursuit.

The connexion of the Bugtis with the British commenced in 1839. The predatory attacks by the Baloch on the communication of the British army in Afghanistan were so dangerous and frequent that after all other measure had failed a force was sent in October 1839, under the command of Major Billamore to punish the offending tribes. on the arrival of the force at Bhuleji it was found that the Kachhi plunders had deserted their country and taken refuge in the Bugti hills. They were followed by Major Billamore's detachment, and as the troops approached Dera, the bugtis seemed at first to be submissive and friendly, but the smallness of the force tempted them to hostilities, and they attacked Major Billamore with their whole strength. The Bugtis were twice singly defeated with great loss, and their chief, Bibrak was captured and sent as a prisoner to Sindh, and great losses were inflicted on the tribes generally Major Billamore remained in the hills for nearly three months when accomplished the object of his expedition, he returned by the Nafusk Pass. The plundering excursion, of the Bugtis were thus checked for a time, but they soon recommenced their raids and forays, and in April, 1840, Lieutenant Clarke, with a detachment of one hundred and eighty men, made an unsuccessful effort to surprise a party of the Khalphar Bugtis in the hills. At length, in 1845, provoked by repeated acts of lawlessness on the part of the Dombkis and Bugtis, Sir Chalres Napier undertook a campaign with a view of Jani and his men drew swords and advanced with a shoput and valiant deeds appeared about to take place. The ground looked firm and level for a fair passage of arms, when suddenly every horse of the British detachment sank into the earth, some sank over girth and saddle, man rolled over and over, all in helpless confusion. The cunning Baloch had drawn them into extensive quicksands. A few months afterwards another body of bugtis who had come to avenge the death of their comrades was attacked by the Zarkuns, and their leader Haider Khan killed, together with twenty-eight others. The bugtis were greatly exasperated by the death of Haider Khan who was looked upon as the best and the bravest leader in the Baloch hills, and immediately fitted out an expedition against the Zarkhuns. The Marris appear to have fomented the strife, and gave a passage through their country to the Bugtis force, which consisted of almost all the Bugti fighting men, led by their chief. The town of Dera is a small place, about one hundred and fifty yards square, surrounded with a good strong mud wall twenty feet high, with towers at the angles, and one gate in the middle of the eastern face. It is supplied with water by a small sparkling stream from the hills on the north side of the valley, distant about two miles from the town. On this small stream, about half a mile from the town, Major Billamore's camp was pitched.

The town was full on people, there was a good bazaar apparently in it, and in and about the place there must have been about seven hundred armed men. At first everything was smooth and friendly, but after few days, when the British detachment had been well scrutinized, its very small numerical strength appeared to be exciting contempt among the proud mountaineers. They soon showed their hostility in various ways,

Obs 1 Ksán is better here tha ks-í-e or kisáin, because the next word begins with a vowel. This is one of the niceties of the language, but by no means a hard and fast rule.

Obs 2 Hákh, earth, clay, is in the genitive case. The involved English sentence has to be broken up before being put into Balochí

Obs 3 Read: There is a tower at each of the four corners, chund, a point of the compass

Obs 4 In the eastern face there is a gate. Other words for "gate" are gali and wárdaf

Obs 5 From it the city receives its water, Milagh, to receive, governs the dative

Obs 6 Change this into the dative voice, and say Major Billamore pitched his camp Pand, journey, distance

Obs 7 Kichaha, market, bazaar. An alternative term is chunda

Obs 8 Or, hapt sadh hasht sadh, etc

Obs 9 Literally, the people were not shy, ták khafagh, to shy, to flinch as horse. The idiom is worth careful noting.

Obs 10 Read: That was how it appeared (was appearing) to us

Obs 11 Hes, rust, dirt, heshi, hostility.

Obs 12 That it might attack, the contingent future. The subject is ghal

Obs 13 Kh-ákht, used to come, phen-dásht, used to show. Note how the sentence opens, Ni, di, oven then, with all this, still etc. if the suffix a be used before gura it should be attached to sahib.

Obs 14 Azh phesha di, that at first, than formely, than usual

Obs 15 Gár-biagh, to be lost, gár khanagh, to lose.

We are hill Baloches, we go on the cliffs with our goats; on our feet are sandals or grass shoes. Before, we stole cattle and fought with Pathans, now we cultivate the ground give us some money. In winter we go down to the plains, for on the hills there is snow, and it is very cold. In the summer we return to the hills. Last year I shot a wolf in a ravine and took the head to the sahib. He cut off its ears and burnt them, and gave me five rupees. I saw a leopard last night coming

A year ago Hassan was killed by Jongal on account of an intrigue, he had with Jogal's wife. The case was heard by a jirga, and the magistrate agreeing with the mukaddims composing it and the chief who presided, found Jogal guilty, and sentenced him to seven years rigorous imprisonment.

No compensation was awarded, as the circumstances of the case did not appear to require such action. For this reason, perhaps, Hassan's relations bore a grudge and swore to be avenged.

One day, accordingly, one Muhammad Ali, a cousin of Jongal, was travelling from Sakhi. Sawar back to his home Sháhi brother of Hassan, waylaid him in a

The boy was greatly addicted to thieving, a tendency which he could not repress. He was in the habit of daily picking up something or other, big or little, and making off with it. I had time and again punished him on this ground, but in account of his mother, whose only son he was, I did not dismiss him. The jemadár also was fond of the boy. The real reason of this was that he used to take a hand in the evil-doings of the jemadar. And another was that the boy used to recite lewd songs, of which the jemadar was extremely fond. He used to put charas into the jemadar's pipe. When I was deposed from my appointment the boy left my service and, joining the jemadar, began to wait on him. I was aware that the jemadar also used to beat him soundly with a view to stopping his thieving proclivities. But the boy persisted in following his evil course. Daily he stole and daily he got beaten for it. For this reason after some days his heart was somewhat embittered against the jemadar.
